Board Orders 'Sit-Downers' Reinstated

Swift & Co. Affected By Ruling; Fansteel Brief Given to Court

Swift & Co., packers, and two subsidiary companies yesterday were ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to reinstate, upon application, all employes who participated in a "sit-down" or "stay-in" strike at their Detroit, Mich., plant last February.

At the same time, the board was being charged in a brief filed in Supreme Court with having approved "lynch law" in deciding a "sit-down" strike controversy in the North Chicago plant of the Fansteel Metalurgical Corporation.

In another order yesterday, the board ordered H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburgh, to disestablish the Heinz Employes' Association and, upon request to bargain collectively with the American Federation of Labor's Canning and Pickle Workers union. The company further was ordered to embody in a signed agreement any understanding reached with the union.

Some Re-employed

In the Swift case, the board called for disestablishment of Newton Employes' Social League as a bargaining agency, holding it to be merely the successor to an employes' representation plan.

The strike was started by truck drivers, who were joined by others, on February 26. The companies, the Newton Packing Co., and the Iowa Packing Co., obtained an injunction and on March 1 notified the strikers they no longer were employes and must vacate the plant. The strikers were evicted March 20 by the sheriff of Wayne County.

Yesterday's order held that the companies had taken back 25 or 30 strikers among 110 first employed when the plant resumed operations and that no policy of exclusion of individual strikers had been developed.

Arguments Next Week

Nevertheless, it ordered that persons employed in place of strikers be dismissed to make way for strikers who desire re-employment, and that strikers not immediately recalled are to be listed preferentially for future employment and paid remedial wages from the date of application.

Fansteel Corporation's Supreme Court brief was filed preparatory to oral arguments next week on litigation involving constitutionality of sit-down strikers.

Fansteel urged the high tribunal to sustain a decision by the Federal Circuit Court at Chicago holding the company had the right to discharge employes who seized two buildings during a 1937 "sit-down" strike.

The board has asked the court to uphold its order directing re-instatement fo the strikers on grounds that the strike was due to refusal of the company to bargain colelctively with representatives of the amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America.

Ruling Assailed

Fansteel's brief contended that "spurning the legal remedies available under the national labor relations act, the "sit-down" strikers took the law into their own hands.

"The board charges the employer with full responsibility for that violence, vandalism and lawlessness thus undertaken as a means of self-redress.

"That is nothing more than an approval of lynch law."

A. F. L. Union Victor

In the Heinz order, the NLRB declared the A. F. of L. union won an election at the plant, 1,079 to 803, over the "company-dominated association" and that while the company met with the union over a period of two months the negotiations resulted only in posting of a labor relations bulletin, instead of a signed written contract.

The company refused to name the union in the bulletin "or to give it any express credit for the results, for 'psychological reasons.'"

The board charged that beyond the refusal to enter into a written agreement the company's actions "indicate that it was not bargaining in good faith."

Planter, 'With Back to Wall, Urges Wider Use of Cotton

Oscar Johnston, shown with Mrs. Johnston in their hotel suite, operates the Nation's largest cotton "patch"—50,000 acres in Mississippi. He's attending the meeting dealing with the cotton surplus

Oscar Johnston, of Mississippi, Describes Two-Price Plan as 'Foolhardy at Best;' He Is Here Attending Three-Day Parley

Stimulation of cotton uses both at home and abroad is the only solution for the mammoth cotton promlem as viewed by Oscar Johnston, who operates the Nation's largest plantation in Mississippi, and who admits the 14,125,000-bale surplus has "put our backs to the wall."

In Washington to attend a three-day conference at the Department of Agriculture, Johnston last night termed proposals for a subsidy for cotton exports "foolhardy at best" and declared he would not comment on a two-price system which would put cotton goods on the market at different price levels for people in different income groups.

For the Government to subsidize cotton exports, Johnston declared, would be to enter into cut-throat competition with England, which is no wthe largest consumer of American cotton next to America itself.

Would Revise Tariff

"I won't say I know what the right plan for getting rid of the big surplus is. World consumption of American cotton, both here and abroad, for one year, is but 11,0000,000, and in addition to the 14,125,000-bale surplus, another 12,000,000-bale crop is in prospect. I think, however, that the answer is two-fold," he said.

"I think we should endeavor to stimulate the use of cotton and cotton products in other countries by an intelligent and selective revision of our trade policies, including primarily the tariff. Also, that we should put on an intensive and coordinated advertising, educational and publicity campaign designed to increase the domestic consumption of cotton. We should expand cotton consumption for uses already known and intensify research work with th: idea of developing new users."

A definite move to put the increased consumption ideas into use is under way, Johnston declared, in plans of the National Cotton Council of America, which will hold its first big meeting in Dallas on January 24.

Five Interests Included

The council is composed of representatives of each of the five primary raw cotton interests—producers, ginners, warehouse men, merchants and seed crushers. Its formation is due to the efforts of Johnston, who is the chairman.

"We have got to make it work," he declared. "Now don't ask me to name a new use for cotton—but I believe they can be found." Work of the council, he said, will not duplicate or conflict that done by the manufacturers in the Cotton Textile Institute; but will supplement it.

It used to be said, Johnston declared, that the cotton problem of the world would be solved if every Chinaman could be made to add an inch to his shirt-tail. "Today, China is raising her own cotton," he reminded, "so I have begun saying that if we could put a petticoat on every Women woman and the situation would be favorable."

China War Cuts U.S. Trade With East 35 Pct.

$600,000,000 Volume Falls to $400,000,000; Boycott Plays a Part

By the United Press.

Japan's undeclared war in China has slashed United States trade with the two warring nations by more than $211,000,000, the Commerce Department revealed last night.

Trade experts said that virtually the entire loss was due to Japan's military venture. Some commerce between this country and China now is being diverted through British and French ports but the amount is said to be relatively small and is not yet reflected in trade statistics.

U. S. Boycott a Factor

United States sales to the two nations in the first 11 months of 1938 dropped off $78,000,000 from the same period in 1937. Exports to Japan declined from $280,000,000 to $211,000,000 and sales to China slumped from $48,000,000 to $31,000,000.

Purchases from the two nations also showed a large drop in the 11-month period, the decline totaling more than $132,000,000. Japan's sales dropped from more than $192,000,000 to less than $115,000,000 and China's from more than $98,600,000 to $43,000,000.

Trade sources said this country's unofficial boycott has played an important part in decrease of trade with Japan. Nippon trade restrictions also are an important factor.

Hongking Trade Fading

For some time some of the loss in trade with China was compensated by imports through the British Crown colony of Hingkong. Figures for the first 11 months of this year show an increase in exports to Hongkong from $16,000,000 to $20,000,000 as compared with a similar period last year.

Figures for November, however, indicate that cutting of communications between the crown colony and the interior of China was felt severely later in the year. Exports in that month declined from $4,000,000 in 1937 to $1,500,000 in 1938.

Commerce Department officials said that practically all trade with China now is being diverted by way of British Rangoon and French Haiphong and that Chinese trade statistics will disappear completely soon. The movement of goods through these ports is too recent to be reflected in present statistics.

Firemen Favor Mutual Health

The Retired Firemen's Association of the District of Columbia Fire Department was on record yesterday in favor of applying for membership in Mutual Health Service, the District Medical Society's proposed medical care plan.

It is believed to be the first group to announce its intention of subscribing to the prepayment plan, launching of which was aproved by the Medical Society this week. It is expected at least two months will be needed to set up administrative machinery.

Lewis Demands Ouster of D.C. Relief Chief, Holding Miss Hill's Job 'Beyond Her Capacity'

Welfare

ance with the provisions of the statute governing old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, and home care aid."

Later in the report, he called attention to "the all-too-near failure to enforce the statutes of the District, which provides penalties for not upholding the provisions of the laws regarding unwarranted grants of public funds."

Miss Hill Asks Facts

Asked for comment on Lewis' statements, Miss Hill said: "I am in no position to comment, since I have seen no facts to back up the assertions." She added:

"All I know about the report is what I have read in the newspapers. I have not been furnished with a copy of it. Moreover, I do not want to get into a newspaper controversy."

She declared Lewis "has never asked me about conditions in my own division." She said she would be in a position to answer when she had the facts on which Lewis' charges were based.

Still Has Sick Leave

Lewis said he realized that Miss Hill had inherited from her predecessors "many of her difficulties." Moreover, he said, he appreciated that "she has ben seriously ill for a part of the period of her incumbency."

In reply, Miss Hill pointed out that she still had coming to her 15 days of sick leave—the length of time allotted for sick leave in a year of employment.

"The inability of the director and her associates," Lewis said, "to collect, analyze and present accurate statistics as to basic conditions and as to costs of operation and probable expenditures has been established so completley as to be beyond question.

"Phoney" Statistics Alleged

"'Phoney' statistics gave the director poor reasons for requiring certain people to go to Blue Plains while allowing unused surpluses of funds which were available for general relief and other such cases of distress to lapse."

Other charges made by Lewis were:

That there were too many supervisory workers in proportion to the number of case workers.

Clients "Bullied" Bureau

That the Public Assistance Division allowed itself to be bullied by a certain type of relief client.

That Street and Miss Hill were responsible for a "shortage of reliable workers."

That the Public Assistance Division has not "met the police half-way."

That Board of Public Welfare heads have failed to make truthful case summaries for submission to the board.

Lewis charged that Miss Hill discharged reliable case workers, and kept "shirkers and misfit workers on the pay rolls."

Holds Officials Cowed

He referred to the "constant parade of cheats and swindlers" on relief in the District, blaming this on "the unwillingness of the chief supervisors to challenge the cases of fraudulent character."

"The inability of the public assistance division to resist compulsion at the hands of applicants and others," he declared, "is having its effect upon the relief population of the District.

"People of the bolder sort know that if they make forays upon relief offices in groups and otherwise make life miserable for the supervisors and the relief workers, they may get relief grants because it is cheaper and easier to grant relief than to resist the appeals.

Confidence "Betrayed"

"At any rate, we have found many of them saying that if they make sufficient complaint they are almost sure they will be given orders for surplus commodities so as to make them leave.

"The Board of Public Welfare has been forced to pass upon such a volume of detail as to make it and its subcommittees too much like ruber-stamping devices for its higher executives.

"Its mebers have been unable to discern that their confidence, in effect, often has been betrayed by the very inability or unwillingness of its executives to make competent, truthful summaries of cases.

Director Needs Force

"The study our investigation has made of these case summaries often has surprised and occasionally has shocked both my investigators and myself."

Referring to Street, he said:

"We believe, although the director does not admit it, that there has been a deliberate attempt to side-track him and to center too much responsibility, for example, in the Public Assistance Division.

"Apparently, the newer responsibilities added since the depression began require a stronger, more forceful, and more dominating director of public welfare than any of the able men who served the District as director in previous times.

Report May Test Street

"The previous experience of the present director in organizing and administering Community Chest consolidations evidently did not prepare him quickly to cope with the prevailing confusion and overlapping of powers within the District.

"Political-legal matters especially seem to confuse the director as to his legal and administrative responsibilities.

"Nobody seems to know what is the director's role as chief administrative officer of the Board of Public Welfare."

He asserted that "the manner in which the director receives and acts upon the findings of fact in this investigation will show whether he should be continued in some responsible position in the proposed enlarged and consolidated Department of Employment and Social Security."

"Chiseling" Cases Cited

Lewis cited a number of cases to substantiate his charge of fraud and "chiseling." One of these detailed the story of an elderly. Montana couple receiving assistance while they remained here to press a claim against the Government for $116,000. Reports that the couple was getting a Montana teacher's pension were not investigated.

In other cases, he told of men obtaining relief while concealing the fact that they were employed by the Government, as well as other instances of concealment and misrepresentation.

Fraudulent charges, he said, were not followed through by investigators or check-ups made to find out what might have been readily ascertained.

'Red Mass' To Attract Many Notables

Religious Program Set Tomorrow at Catholic U. Campus

Acceptances of invitations to participate in a "Red Mass," which will be celebrated tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the campus of Catholic University of America, Fourth street and Michigan avenue northeast, have been received from several members of the diplomatic corps, judiciary, Congress and Government departments, it was announced yesterday by a spokesman for the university.

The "Red Mass," so named because in its petition the aid of the Holy Spirit—symbolized by the flaming fire of Divine love and wisdom—is invoked, was inaugurated several centuries ago in France. There priests, robed in red vestments, officiated at the ceremony at the invitation of the French judges, who were robed in scarlet, for the purpose of invoking divine wisdom and justice at the opening of court sessions.

Notables Invited

Later, it was stated at the university, the judiciary and bar of England adopted the custom before the opening of the courts. In New York, the Guild of Catholic Lawyers met annually with judges and members of law faculties to participate in the Red Mass in old St. Andrew's Church. Observance of the mass is practiced today in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois and California. Tomorrow's service is intended to inaugurate the custom in Washington, and is to mark the opening of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

Invitations were issued to the President, Senators, Representatives, the Justices of the Supreme and of the District Courts, members of the Cabinet and Diplomatic Corps and administrative heads and legal counsels of Government departments in Washington.

The mass will be celebrated by the Very Rev. Robert J. White, dean of the law school of the university, and also will be part of the participation of the school of law in the university's jubilee year celebration. The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, archbishop of Cincinnati, will give the sermon. ther officers of the mass will be the Very Rev. Hubert L. Motry, dean of the School of Canon Law, as deacon; the Rev. John K. Ryan, assistant professor of philosophy, as subdeacon, and the Rev. William Lallou, of the faculty of sacred theology, as master of ceremonies.

Envoys to Attend

Among those announced as having accepted the university's invitation to participate in the mass were the following:

Diplomats—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brennan, E. E. and M. P., Ireland; Mr. Michal Budny, Attache, Poland (in absence of Ambassador); Senor Dr. Don Julian R. Caceres, Charge d'Affaires of Honduras, and Mrs. Caceres; Senor Dr. Don Hector David Castor, E. E. and M. P., El Salvador; Mr. Ralph W. Close, K. C., E. E. and M. P., Union of South Africa, and Mrs. Close; Mr. Otto Wadsted, E. E. and M. P., Denmark; Dr. Pedro de Alba, acting director general of the Pan American Union.

Judges—Mr. Justice Pierce Butler, Supreme Court, and Mrs. Butler; Mr. Justice Harold M. Stephens, Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Stephens; Mr. Justice Justin Miller, Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Miller; Judge Ellen K. Raedy, Municipal Court of the District of Columbia.

Senators—Henry F. Ashhurst, Arthur Capper, E. W. Gibson, Guy M. Gillette, J. Hamilton Lewis, Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., and Mrs. Lodge, Patrick McCarran and Mrs. McCarran, Francis Maloney and Sherman Minton.

Representatives—Homer D. Angell, John G. Alexander, Clarence Cannon and Mrs. Cannon, Frank Carlson, Albert E. Carter, John D. Dingell, Andrew Edmiston, J. O. Fernandez, T. Alan Goldsborough, Sam Hobbs, Benjamin Jarrett, Marvin Jones, Ed. V. Izac, Martin J. Kennedy, Carl E. Mapes, Earl C. Michener, John R. Murdock, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Clyde H. Smith, J. Joseph Smith, Martin F. Smith and Mrs. Smith, Foster Stearns and Mrs. Stearns.

Government officials—Phillip E. Buck, General Counsel, Federal Alcohol Administration; T. A. M. Craven, commissioner, Federal Communications Commission; Huntington Cairnes, assistant general counsel, Treasury Department; William J. Dempsey, general counsel, Federal Communications Commission; James L. Dougherty, assistant general counsel, RFC; Robert E. Freer, chairman, Federal Trade Commission; Wilfred C. Gilbert, Library of Congress; Charles Fahy, general counsel, National Labor Relations Board; Hon. Louis Johnson, the Assistant Secretary of War; W. T. $58,000 Estate Left By Dr. M. E. Miller

An $58,000 estate was distributed in the will of Dr. Maurice E. Miller, president of the board of Gospel Mission, which was offered for probate in District court yesterday, between children and two religious groups.

Dr. Miller died at 70 on December 15 while visiting his daughter, Mrs. Barbara M. Nielson, in Albuquerque, N. Mex. e retired from practice as an eye specialist ten years ago.

Dr. Miller left his daughter and son, Dr. Beveridge Miller, his home at 3600 Edmunds street northwest, and interests of one-third each in two houses on H street northwest. The Gospel Mission and the African Inland Miss, Brooklyn, were each given $1,000 and one-xith interest in the H street property.

Washington Pays $35,760,942 in Revenue Taxes

The District paid $35,760,942.29 in internal revenue taxes to the Federal Government in 1938, Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, reported yesterday.

The District's payments exceeded those of 27 States, Alaska, the Philippine Islands and Puerto Rico. With only .48 per cent of the Nation's population, the National Capital paid .63 per cent of its internal revenue levies.

Virginia, with its large tobacco taxes, paid $202,403,845, while Maryland payments amount to $108,973,372. The national revenue collection was $5,658,765,314, or 21.6 per cent above the previous year.

Drewry Heads Democratic Congress Committee Ford Named Assistant to Party Whip

Representative P. H. Drewry, of Virginia, was re-elected chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee at a meeting last night. Reports by Drewry and Capt. Victor Hunt Harding, executive secretary, showed that Democratic Congressional candidates in more than 90 per cent of the districts ran ahead of party candidates for other offices.

DREWRY

Other committee officers reelected were Representatives Smith, West Virginia, secretary; Crowe, Indiana; Murdock, Utah, and Parsons, Illinois, vice chairmen; Chapman, Kentucky, chairman of executive committee; Bloom, New York, chairman of finance committee, and Johnson, Oklahoma, chairman of speakers and publicity committee. Joseph J. Sinnott, of Virginia, was reelected sergeant at arms.

Representative Boland (Democrat), Pennsylvania, the Democratic whip, announced yesterday selection of Representative Ford (Democrat), California, as his chief assistant. Ford formerly held the same post, but was displaced in the Seventy-fifth Congress by Representative Dockweiler (Democrat), California. Dockweiler did not seek re-election to the present Congress.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, sai dhe again would ask Congress to adopt amendments to the Walsh-Healey Act, which John L. Lewis has placed at the top of the CIO's legislative program.

The changes would compel companies with Government contracts of $2,000 or more to enforce a 40-hour week and pay wages the Labor Department approves.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, was reminded yesterday that he wasn't always a Senator, and once had to pay for his haircuts. Exploring dusty personal files he discovered a Congressional press card issued to him 47 years ago when he came here as a newspaper correspondent. He now owns the paper—the Topeka Capital.

Representatives Wigglesworth (Republican), Massachusetts, and Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, announced they would introduce legislation for an inquiry of the Federal Communications Commission and of alleged monopolistic practices by the radio industry. Connery said the recent investigation by the commission itself "has proved nothing."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, proposes to place a statue of Will Rogers, late Oklahoma and California cowboy humorist, in the Capitol. Thomas asked to authroize the Will Rogers Memorial Commission to place the statue temporarily in the rotunda.

Senator Capper proposed that aliens be eliminated from population counts that determine representation in Congress.

The Kansas Senator said he and Representative Tarver (Democrat), Georgia, would reintroduce in this Congress a proposed constitutional amendment known as the "stop alien representation amendment."

Philadelphia, Jan. 6 (AP).—Representative George P. Darrow was sworn in today as a member of the Seventy-sixth Congress in his room at Naval Hospital. He has been ill since his re-election within two weeks. He will be 85 next month.

Reorganization Faces Fights In Both House and Senate

North Carolina, yesterday designated chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, said it is "up to my committee" to determine what course to follow on the nomination of Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. The committee is expected to meet next week. The Sheppard report, condemning WPA campaign activities, will be considered in connection with the Hopkins' nomination.

Fate of the Government reorganization program, pigeonholed last session by the House, appeared to hinge on what modifying changes are written into the measure.

Opposition Majority Possible

Seventy-seven Democrats who voted against the bill last session have been returned to Congress. Added to the 169 probably hostile Republican votes, they provide a House majority against the bill in its old form.

To meet this situation, House managers of the old bill tentatively have agreed to split the program into several parts to divide opposition, and are considering further modifications.

But it was learned last night that definite decisions have not been reached, and leaders are uncertain on whether to launch the measure first in the House, as had been planned, or in the Senate.

Cochran Refuses Comment

Representative Cochran declined comment on strategy.

"It is my understanding that the President will send a special message to Congress on reorganization," Cochran said. "When that comes up, I may introduce a resolution providing for a committee to consider the legislation. I don't know what action the House will take. I don't know who the Speaker will name to the committee."

Senator Byrd, strong advocate of Government reorganization, but opposed to powers granted the President under the old Brownlow bill, said he is convinced the Senate will not pass the measure unless the midifications he listed are included.

Byrd said the group he represents will not insist on passage of the Wheeler amendment, "if something just as good is offered." The Wheeler amendment required Congress to take affirmative action before Presidential merger became effective. The Administration flatly opposes the Wheeler limitation, but is willing to accept the Kniffen amendment included in the House bill last session, providing for a majority vote "veto" of the President's orders. An effort to work out a compromise between the two is expected.

Confirmations Forecast

Confirmation of the President's appointments was the sole business before the Senate, as the House delayed action on reorganization and rushed hearings on the deficiency relief bill. Senate Majority Leader Barkley forecast little difficulty in confirming the Frankfurter or the Hopkins and Murphy nominations.

Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, judiciary subcommittee chairman, announced no witnesses for this morning's hearings on Frankfurter. Some Court Plan opponents in the Senate indicated a desire to question the Harvard law mentor on his attitude on the court measure, which he is understood to have opposed.

Joining in general forecasts of Frankfurter's "almost unanimous" confirmation, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, yesterday called him "an exceedingly able man, a great student of the law and in my judgment a splendid addition to the Supreme Court.

Designating four new chairmen of Senate committees, the Senate Democratic steering group yesterday plugged Democratic committee gaps left by election defeats, retirements and deaths.

Senator Bailey was chosen Commerce Committee chairman, succeeding the late Senator Copeland, of New York. Other chairmen: Senator Overton, of Louisiana, Manufactures Committee; Senator Minton, of Indiana, Pensions Committee, and Seator Boe, of Washington, Patents Committee.

New Committee Posts

New Democratic committee appointments follow:

Finance, Senator Radcliffe, of Maryland; Foreign Relations, Senator Gillette, of Iowa, Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina; Commerce, Senator Hill, of Alabama, and Senator Mead, of New York; Agriculture, Senator Minton, Senator Lucas, of Illinois, and Senator Stewart, of Tennessee; Interstate Commerce, Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Senator Stewart; Judiciary, Senator Miller, of Arkansas; Appropriations, Senator Maloney, of Connecticut and Senator Chevez, of New Mexico; Banking and Currency, Senator Miller, Senator Clark, of Idaho, and Senator Downey, of California; Military, Senator Clark, of Missouri; Naval, Senator Lucas, and Postoffices, Senator Clark, of Idaho.

Republicans Say Wallace Plays Politics

McNary and Capper Reply to Secretary's Retort for Suggestions

Republicans in Congress yesterday accused Secretary of Agriculture Wallace with trying to play politics with the Nation's farm problem.

In reply to the Secretary's challenge that the "opposition" present a program, Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, member of the agriculture committee, declared Wallace "made a serious mistake in putting the matter on a political basis. The agriculture problem is not a political matter." He said he had supported every Wallace program.

"It's just an attempt to manufacture an alibi for the weakness of his program," said Senae Minority Leader McNary.

Instead of partisan political statements, Senator Capper said, Secretary Wallace should call together leaders from the agricultural States and organizations, regardless of party, to "perfect a farm program that will be accepted by the farmers of the country."

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, sponsor of many New Deal farm acts, said he warmly supported the Secretary's challenge to the Republicans.

"From Hoover down the line, the Republicans are criticizing the whole farm program," he declared. "It's time for them to offer something."

Rig 130 Feet High Ordered for Shrine

A rig that stands 130 feet high, as tall as a 12-story building, is being shipped here to help build the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, engineers revealed yesterday.

Pending arival of the rig, steel cylinders and pile-driving equipment, foundation work for the marble monument to be erected on the banks of the Tidal Basin is proceeding slowly. However, once the equipment and materials are on the job, three shifts of workmen will be employed to rush the project to completion,, said Francis F. Gillen, Government engineer in charge.

Schulte Aroused By Refusal of 50 More Police

Refusal of the Budget Bureau to allow the 50 additional District police privates yesterday aroused Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, a member of the House District Committee. Schulte was given a watch by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, last year after he had been robbed of his own.

"What excuse can the Budget Bureau give for this denial?" Schulte asked. "The city has grown and a larger police force is necessary to protect the public from criminals and the drunken or reckless driver."

The Maritime Commission yesterday asked for bids on a Diesel-propelled cargo ship for the Erie & St. Lawrence Corporation, New York City, to operate on the New York barge canal.

Italians Sack French Depot In Ethiopia

Daladier Denounces Duce Claims; Algerian Chiefs Proclaim Fealty

By John Elliott
Special Cable to The Post.

Algiers, Algeria, Jan. 6.—Closing his North African tour in this capital of Algeria, Premier Daladier denounced today, with more vigor than he has displayed at any time during his trip, the Italian claims on French colonial territory.

[Simultaneously, an Associated Press report from Djibouti, French Somaliland, said Fascists had sacked the station at Diredawa, Ethiopia, and manhandled employes of the French-owned Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railroad. The co-operative store also was reported attacked and French signs torn down.

Bars Door to Claims

Daladier definitely barred the door against any yielding to Premier Mussolini's claims by saying:

"In the days to come I will oppose all ambitions and claims and all more or less sly methods. I will not yield an acre of territory. I will not permit myself to be duped by juridical pretexts. There is no right against the right of France."

Referring to the abandonment of Czecho-Slovakia at Munich last September, Daladier declared:

"France desires to live in peace with all countries. To maintain peace she has consented to heavy sacrifices. But if this desire is interpreted as a sign of weakness, resignation and a sort of abdication, then we shall cry 'halt!' It should be known that, against any attempt against our colonial empire, direct or indirect, by force or trickery, we will oppose our determination and our will, which nothing in the world can bend."

Daladier's speech was delivered at a luncheon in the summer palace of the governor general.

Three hundred and fifty guests were invited to the palace, including 70 Arab sheiks and caids whose presence attested to their solidarity with France.

Chiefs Express Loyalty

An expression of loyalty by the native chiefs to France was given by their spokesman, Saiah Abdul Kader, who voiced "their zealous patriotism, which resented any attack on the integrity and patriotism of the whole French territory."

Daladier stayed only six hours at Algiers. The Foch, accompanied by the cruiser Colbert, brought him here from Tunis early today. He sailed for France at 3 p. m. As a demonstration of the loyalty of the French North Africa possessions and as manifestations of France's military power to defend them, there can be no doubt that Daladier's tour was an immense success.

among 12 children of Irish immigrant parents.

Ship Worker at Newport News

Walter Kelly was born at Mineville, N. Y., October 29, 1873, and began earning his own living as a millworker at 12. Five years later he went to Philadelphia as an apprentice machinist in the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and from there to the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., at Newport News.

He saw service during the Spanish-American War in Cuba. After the war he reutrned to Newport News, operated a hotel, made an unsuccessful campaign for Congress and finally went to New York. There he made a reputation as a storyteller which gained him a part in "Huckleberry Finn" in 1902 and led to his long stage and film career.

In the grand old days of vaudeville, Walter Kelly was one of its most highly paid stars. He toured also in England, Ireland, Scotland, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. He was single.

Train Kills Two At 'Old Bloody' Grade Crossing

Goldsboro, Md., Jan. 6 (AP).—Two persons were killed at "Old Bloody" crossing here tonight when the Pennsylvania Railroad's Wilmington-to-Easton "Bullet" struck their car.

The dead were identified as Sam Newton Smith, about 45, Hillsboro, Md., poultry dealer, and Miss Elizabeth Bittle, 16, of Ridgley, Md.

The wreck was at 6:35 p. m., at the first main road crossing south of the Goldsboro station, where eight have been killed in the past two years.

Maryland Sets Low Record for Auto Fatalities

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—Maryland followed the Nation-wide downward trend in automobile fatalities during 1938 with 174 fewer persons killed than in 1937, State Police Department statistics showed today.

There were 416 persons killed during the year—309 in the counties and 107 in Baltimore City. This compared to 590 deaths in 1937, of which 449 were in the counties and 141 in Baltimore. This was a drop of 29.5 per cent, which State police officials declared was far better than the trend in other States.

Volunteer Firemen At Emmitsburg Elect

Emmitsburg, Md., Jan. 6.—Charles F. Troxell was elected president of the Emmitsburg Fire Co. yesterday. Other officers are J. W. Breichner, vice president; Roy E. Baker, secretary; J. Elmer Zimmerman, treasurer; Clarence G. Frailey, Charles P. Mort, directors; Herbert W. Rogez, chief; Joseph R. Hoke, assistant chief; Roger D. Myers, nozzleman; Lewis Bell, hose director.

Capt. Towers, Ocean Flier, To Head Navy Air Bureau in '40

sion, Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, remarked yesterday, "I was surprised, to say the least, to see that the senior selection board had failed to select Towers for rear admiral.

"Capt. Towers is outstanding as a naval officer as well as a naval aviator. It is not too much to say that no single individual has done more for the development of naval aviation than Capt. Towers. I feel sure, however, that the error in not selecting Capt. Towers will be corrected by the President appointing Towers next chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics—a position for which he is eminently qualified."

United States Air Services Magazine declared editorially in its January issue: "Capt. Towers' experience has not been limited to aviation."

"He has performed duties aboard ship in engineering, ordnance and other specialities, including command of the largest vessel in the Navy, the U. S. S. Saratoga," it continued. On shore he has commanded the Navy's largest air station, been Assistant Naval Attache to all the major countries in Europe and twice has served as Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

"It is impossible to set down . . . the enormous effect Capt. Towers has had on the development of naval aviation. No other officer has done more and few so much. It is not by accident that we are the leading nation of the world in this particular field. His capabilities make him welcome where the best minds consider design, construction, and operational phases of all kinds of airplanes and naval vessels. In fact, it is difficult to conceive of a more well-rounded, balanced and versatile office in the entire United States Navy.

"Capt. Towers, in short, has a splendid personality and fine military bearing which make him respected by all and idolized by younger naval officers. And this is the man that the last Naval Board failed to select for rear admiral!"

ican people," he explained. "Now that that objective has been accomplished, we want to make a cold, exhaustive investigation of the facts. There will be no hearings during the long period we will spend digging up this material—no publicity."

Dies was confident the House would authorize resumption of the investigation. He predicted, in fact, that there would not be 40 votes against continuance, and that any Representative voting in opposition would be defeated in the 1940 Congressional elections.

Dies declared the Justice Department now could go before a grand jury and get an indictment against the German-American Bund and the Communist Party for failure to register with the State Department.

Mr. Roosevelt said reports that he had asked House leaders to oppose Dies' request for more funds was just another newspaper story.

The G-men are expected to bear down on activities of Nazi enthusiasts in this country and other fascist organizations, but not to make a special investigation.

Bund Probed Last Year

The FBI, in an investigation of the German-American Bund last summer, accumulated a vast amount of material, which was turned over to the Dies committee after being judged insufficient to warrant criminal action.

Meanwhile, two Soviet government agencies were among 14 individuals and firms which the State Department announced yesterday had registered as agents of foreign principals—three months after the deadline set in the act for registration.

They were Intourist, Inc., the Soviet state tourist bureau, with offices in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, and Kenneth Durant, manager of the New York bureau of Tass, a newspaper telegraph agency of the Soviet Union. The latter said he registered merely to avoid misunderstanding.

The latest batch brought total registrations to 273.

Sincerity Doubted, Md. Man Is Kept Single, Not Free

John Thomas Forbes, 24, colored, who was released from the jail at Upper Marlboro, Md., on his promise to marry the mother of his child, was behind the bars again yesterday after the Catholic priest who was to have performed the ceremony refused because he doubted the man's "sincerity and good faith."

Forbes left the jail in company with his bride-to-be and Sheriff William E. Cliftin to see Father Francis J. Loughran about getting married. The 48-hour marriage law had been waived to permit the wedding without delay.

But the priest recognized Forbes as the same man who had appeared before him several weeks ago to be married to another woman and declined to perform the ceremony. So yesterday Forbes was still single, but not free.

refugee country. What success he has had, if any, could not be learned.

Accompanying Rublee to Berlin will be two other Americans, Robert Pell, assistant director of the refugee committee, and Joseph Cotton, financial adviser. In Berlin the Americans will be joined by a financial expert from a staff of the British Embassy there. Immediate contact will be established with Dr. Schacht and high German officials.

150,000 Immediate Problem

One of the first points of discussion will be a provision in the Schacht plan which calls for the more or less immediate evacuation of some 150,000 able-bodied young Jewish men and women.

It is suggested that emigration efforts should be concentrated on this group at first, because it would consist almost entirely of workers who might be sent abroad to establish themselves and prepare some sort of permanent abode for the more elderly Jews who could follow later.

In this manner, it is said, emigration might be kept orderly and be prevented from turning into a mass rout. The younger Jews, it is felt, could be assimilated more easily by the countries of refuge.

The Schacht plan did not mention age limits in this connection. Rublee hopes to clear up this and other obscurities. Rublee is expected back in London before January 26, the day on which he will report to a plenary meeting of representatives of the 32 nations on his committee.

Roosevelt Passes Query

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt referred reporters to the State Department yesterday when asked whether Ambassador Phillips at Rome had acted under White House instructions in requesting Italy permit some European refugees to make their homes in Italian Ethiopia.

Without being specific, Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, said Ambassador William Phillips had a cordial conversation early this week with Premier Mussolini. Phillips reported, he said, that Mussolini's reply to Mr. Roosevelt's refugee proposals was both helpful and co-operative.

First Robin Seen, But Hagerstown Keeps Coats On

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Jan. 6.—Weather prognosticators were certain that the robin that Miss Mary R. Yeager saw in her yard here yesterday was one that forgot to go South with the approach of winter and certainly was not a harbinger of spring. For many years the return of the red-breasted bird was looked upon as heralding the early approach of spring until a few years ago when the worst blizzard in history blocked some roads for nearly a month soon after the first robins arrived.

Eastern Shore Starts Spring Plowing Early

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 6 (AP).—Unseasonably warm weather today sent Eastern Shore Maryland farmers into their fields weeks ahead of time to do their spring plowing.

With the mercury rising as high as 65 after the holiday freeze, plowers reported conditions unusually fine for breaking, despite a dry December.

Mrs. Parker Restrains Wit To Help Spain

She Collects $95 for Starving Orphans at Leon Henderson Home

Dorothy Parker came to Washington yesterday with such a soul-felt plea for the starving orphans of Spain that she broke down and wept and a group of intellectuals at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson on Bancroft place, contributed $95.

Ten minutes later, however, she took time out to clear up a few misconceptions concerning the masterful wit which some critics have put ahead of her poems and plays. She denied she had uttered any large portion of the swift, wise-cracking humor attributed to her.

"There are only 24 hours in a day," she observed.

Still a Humorist

Both in an interview and during her talk at the Hendersons' Mrs. Parker, who won a O. Henry short story award for "Big Blonde," proved that it is not necessary to cease being a humorist in order to be serious about human suffering.

"A humorist," she explained to a questioner, "is just a person who it happens is whistling past the worst graveyard to the worst tune. I could do more for the cause if I were pretty," she added, which some listeners took as a joke.

Mrs. Parker, who is really Mrs. Alan Campbell, wife of the actor, was present in Washington as guest of honor, together with Miss Si Lan Chen, daughter of Eugene Chen, former finance minister of China, at a reception preceding the American Congress for Peace and Democracy, which opens today. The cause of Spanish democracy is one of the issues with which the congress is concerned, and about a year ago Mrs. Parker was in Spain, and "as far from the firing line near Madrid as from Fifty-ninth street to the Battery in New York."

Sits On the Piano

While sitting on a piano in order to make her diminutive self seen and heard by the group of liberals who had drifted to the house, Mrs. Parker proved herself master of spoken as well as written drama.

"Now and then something happens that you've got to talk about, even if you are a very bad speaker and scared stiff besides," she said. "It is not right to keep your mouth shut. Right now loyalist Spain is one place in Europe where they still think enough of democracy to defend it. I am pretty damn sick," she added, "of the newspaper talk of a 'civil war' in Spain. I was there a year ago, and they called it an invasion, and that's what it is.

"Only one thing will defeat the Spanish," she declared, "and that is hunger. The older children are so patient and the younger ones are so puzzled. I saw them in Madrid and Barcelona and Valencia. The milk had to be cut down, so that while 3-year-old children were fed, there was nothing for 4-year-olds. I saw one little boy holding a baby who was being fed, but he couldn't be fed himself.

Tells of Flight

"I don't" Mrs. Parker burst out, "like to make appeals for funds, but this is no time for coquetry—for God's sake they need it."

She continued, describing cases of pathetic old men, dazed refugees fleeing from the lines with a few worthless possessions, until one person after another in the little room began to press $5, $10 and $20 bills into her hands. Within three minutes the total had reached $95.

One of the first to reach Mrs. Parker's side was Louis Fisher, who spent months in Spain as war correspondent for The Nation. Others who pressed about her included Dr. Robert Morse Lovett, Mr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Harry Lamberton, president of the Washington branch of the League for Peace and Democracy; Gardiner Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. Lawrence Smith, Mrs. Edwin Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dunthorne, Mrs. Eleanor Fowler and Dr. W. V. Woelke, chairman of the Citizens Committee for Medical Freedom.

conviction was a welter of lies and perjury woven by "capitalistic persecutors."

Gov. Olson received a letter tonight from Attorney General Earl Warren, calling attention to verbal attacks assertedly made by Mooney against the integrity of the United States Supreme Court and the California Supreme Court. Warren asserted, however, he was making no protest against the pardon.

"I have not considered Mooney's opinion of the courts," the Governor stated after reading the letter. "My action is based on the confessions of perjury and the doubtful evidence which have grown out of the case."

Exuberantly Mooney prepared for vindication and freedom. He spent most of the day receiving visitors and packing up to leave what he always has termed his "living tomb."

W. H. Helms' Rites Today

Funeral services for William H. Helms, 86, who died at his home at Franconia Thursday, will be held Monday at 2 p. m. at the Cunningham funeral home in Alexandria, conducted by the Rev. O. B. Lloyd, pastor of Beulah Baptist Church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaretta Helms, a son, Thomas W. Helms, of Lorton, and three daughters, Mrs. Rebecca Miller and Mrs. Margaretta Sisson, both of Alexandria, and Mrs. Loretta Crockett, of Groveton.

Carroll D White

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Jan 6.—Services will be held here tomorrow for Carroll D. White, 52, who died at his home late Monday night of a heart attack. He was employed by the State Road Commission. Surviving are his wife, the former Lena Steedman, of Harpers Ferry, and two children, Harwood White, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Eleanor, who resides at home.

Gov. Price Reports Ickes Sympathetic On Parkway Work

By the Associated Press.

Gov. James H. Price of Virginia, said yesterday after a conference with Secretary Ickes, the Cabinet member was sympathetic with Virginia's desire to push to early completion the Colonial National parkway connecting Yorktown, Williamsburg and Jamestown, Va.

The parkway is within the Colonial National Monument, under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service.

The Governor, accompanied by Representatives Bland and Satterfield, in whose district the Colonial Monument is located, called on the Secretary to express, he said, Virginia's interest in the development and to urge its earliest possible completion.

The Governor said that while the Secretary expressed his interest in the matter, no commitments were made.

W.Va. Police Chief Indicted in Killing

Princeton, W. Va., Jan. 6. (AP).—The police chief of Matoaka was indicted on a charge of murder today by a grand jury which also returned bills charging a woman with killing her husband and a man with slaying his brother.

Albert Lester, 25-year-old miner, was shot to death on the street at Matoaka last Saturday. Police Chief R. H. Lambe, who was indicted, said he was trying to arrest Lester on a misdemeanor charge and fired in self-defense when Lester resisted.

Franco Retreats On 2 Fronts, Madrid Reports

Victories Claimed by Loyalists in Toledo, Estramadura Sectors

By the United Press.

Barcelona, Saturday, Jan. 7.—A Loyalist war communique issued at midnight said insurgent troops were in retreat on two fronts south of Madrid—the long-quiet Toledo sector and the Estramadure battlefront—under pressure of large-scale loyalist assaults.

On the Toledo front, 35 miles south of the former capital, a surprise government assault was said to have driven Generalissimo Francisco's insurgents from Casa Calabaza Baja. Large numbers of insurgents were said to have been taken prisoners.

On the Estramadure front, 175 miles southwest of Madrid, the government offensive of Gen. Jose Miaja rolled on with undiminished force. The communique said, after two days of fighting that carried the government troops eastward and southward to the borders of insurgent Badajoz and Seville provinces.

Miaja's troops reported the capture of Valsequillo and Granjuela, centers of the rich mining basin on the eastern slopes of the Grana and Trapera mountains, and were nearing three other vital towns—Alcaracejos, Penarroyo and Pueblo del Terrible.

One column swung westward from Penarroya toward Fuenteovejuna, 12 miles westward.

Within the past 48 hours, the Loyalist communique said, Miaja's forces (reported to number close to 80,000) have occupied nearly 100 square miles of insurgent territory...

"The number of prisoners has been enormous, many surrendering with white flags," the war office said.

Insurgent headquarters placed all stress on Franco's gains in Catalonia, contending that half of the "Catalonian" army of the enemy had been wiped out in the two weeks of fighting.

Loyalist dead, wounded and prisoners were placed at 45,000 in an insurgent communique. There was no estimate of Franco's losses, but it was said by the Loyalists they were even higher because the insurgents are on the offensive.

On the northern Catalonian flank Franco's Navarrese-Galician troops were said to have driven on eastward 10 miles from Artesa de Segre and to have captured Vinaixa on the southern wing, thereby cutting the Lerida-Tarragona road at another point within 21 miles of Tarragona on the coast.

Chile Orders 25-40% Cuts In Food Prices

Milk and Bread Cheap; Popular Front Redeems Workers' Pawned Tools

By the Associated Press.

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 6.—President Pedro Aguirre Cerda's 14-day-old Popular Front government is giving Chile cheaper food and free redemption of pawn tickets.

The leftist government, a coalition of radical, socialist and communist parties which took office December 24, already has shown the nation its political leanings in a rousing reception to Indalecio Prieto, former premier of government Spain and in official consideration of recognition of Soviet Russia.

Already having sliced 25 per cent from the price of bread, officials today arranged for a 40 per cent cut in the cost of pasteurized milk to 80 centavos a liter (4 cents a quart).

The controlled price affected only part of the supply at first, but authorities expect ultimately to make it uniform.

Antonio Poupin, Popular Front minister of labor, told butchers' representatives in a bitter discussion that if meat prices were not 40 per cent cheaper within two weeks the government would take drastic measures without further warning.

The government elated working classes soon after its inauguration with the announcement government-owned pawnshops would return free all sewing machines and other working tools they held as pledges. Already at least 12,000 implements have been returned to owners throughout the nation.

The government's list of projects offers Chile hope also for cleaner jails, more schools, two new cruisers, vacations for miners and farm workers, cheaper nitrates and other fertilizers and control of speculation.

Plans were announced today for construction of mining plants in three provinces, each to cost 9,000,000 pesos ($450,000), in a government plan to aid small miners.

Dr. Freeman Installs Rector Tomorrow

To Visit Ascension In Silver Spring and Rock Creek Parish

Diocesan duties in and near Washington tomorrow will mean a busy day for the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL.D, Episcopal Bishop of Washington.

In the Church of the Ascension, in Silver Spring, Md., at 9:30 a. m., he will officiate at the installation of the Rev. Joseph A. Hauber as first rector of the independent parish.

Ascension was a mission from 1928 until January, 1938. The Rev. James S. Cox, vicar, was elected rector, but was not installed because of his acceptance of a pastorate in Chatham, Va.

The Rev. Mr. Hauber was called by the vestry on September 1, after serving as supply minister during July and August.

The bishop will return to preach at cathedral evensong services at 4 p. m.

Robert Barrow, organist, will begin a series of organ recitals at the 11 a. m. service, when Canon Precentor William M. Bradner will preach.

At 8 p. m. the bishop will deliver the "Commission to the Apostles," a feature of the "Service of Lights" at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish.

Among the participants will be the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the cathedral; the Rev. John S. Kromer, of Holy Comforter Parish; Dr. F. J. Bohanan, rector of the host church, and the Rev. Robert L. Jones.

Other Episcopal Services

St. John's. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart will dedicate a memorial pew at 11 a. m. tomorrow to the late Chief Justice of the United States, Melville W. Fuller. Justice Fuller, who presided over the Supreme Court from 1888 to 1910, was a vestryman and warden of St. John's from 1894 to 1909.

Coleman Jennings is chairman of the arrangements committee, which includes Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. James F. Francis, daughter of Justice Fuller; Mrs. Florian C. J. Vurpillot and Maj. Gist Blair.

Epiphany. The Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, D. D., rector, will speak on "Scientific Aids to Religion" at 11 a. m. Dr. Yarnall will preach at 8 p. m.

Grace. A "Service of Lights" at 8 p. m. will mark the Feast of the Epiphany. The church will be lighted first entirely by candles. Later all candles will be extinguished save one over the altar, from which all the candles will be relighted, symbolizing the spread of the Gospel from Christ, who terms himself "The Light of the World." The Rev. G. Freeland Peter, D. D., of All Saints' Church will be guest speaker.

Our Savior. "A Place for Everyone and Everyone in His Place" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Alvin L. Wills at the 11 o'clock service. At 8 p. m. the rector and Mrs. Wills will be hosts to all young married people of the congregation in the parish house.

All Saints'. The Rev. Teller Cocke, rector, will preside at 7:30 a. m. Holy Communion and at the "Candle Light" service at 8 p. m. The Rev. G. Freeland Peter, D. D., will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Christ of the Common Way."

St. Andrew's. "Some Blessings of the Past Seven Years" will be described by the Rev. Alfred J. Wilder, pastor, at the 11 a. m. service, which marks the seventh anniversary of his pastorate here.

St. Agnes'. Young people and acolytes will hold their monthly corporate communion at 7 p. m. Following this service Horace A. Varian, of Baltimore, will speak at a breakfast in Guild Hall. The Rev. A. J. DuBois, rector, will preach at 11 a. m. solemn mass on "The Epiphany," and at 8 p. m. on "Christian Healing."

Transfiguration. The Feast of Epiphany will be observed with Communion services at 7:30 and 11 a. m., at which the Rev. J. J. Queally, rector, will preach.

Dr. Anderson to Preach On 'The Diamond Rule'

The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, D. D., minister of First Congregational Church, will speak at the morning service tomorrow on "The Diamond Rule." The A Cappella Choir of Washington, directed by Ruby Smith Stahl, will present a program of sacred music at the 7:45 p. m. service.

Church of the Brethren

The Rev. Warren D. Bowman D. D., will speak at 11 a. m., his subject will be "The Mind of Christ." At 8 p. m. he will speak on "The Highest Generosity."

At the meeting of the B. Y. P. D. at 6:50, Dr. John S. Noffsinger will speak on "Appreciating the Bible."

Church of the Week

Clarendon Church Grows With Expanding Community

THE CLARENDON BAPTIST CHURCH.

800 Members Added During Pastorate of Rev. Mr. Mitchell

Evangelism and aggressiveness have been largely responsible for the remarkable development of the Clarendon Baptist Church in Arlington County, Va., which has grown from 200 to more than 1,000 members during the 15-year pastorate of the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell.

Located in the rapidly expanding area at Wilson boulevard and Highlands avenue, the church has a task to provide space for its parishoners, and is considering plans for erection soon of a new building.

A member of the D. C. Church Federation, the church also has had several members recently elected to the Potomac Baptist Association, comprising churches within the area of Fredericksburg, Winchester, Warrenton and Arlington.

Active workers include Miss Catherine Stone, secretary of the young people's unit of the Potomac Association; Miss Pansy Wiltshire, president of the youth association, and Mrs. A. C. Jones, State representative of the Woman's Missionary Board.

Mr. Mitchell (Pastor)

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell served for two years as moderator of the Potomac Baptist Association.

Clarendon Church sponsors a Boy Scout trooop, led by Monroe Stockett; a Girl Scout organization, under Mrs. M. A. Foster; seven young people's devotional groups and a boys' missionary unit, the "Royal Ambassador" movement. The latter group will broadcast over WJSV February 20, one of 11 simultaneous broadcasts throughout the State under Baptist auspices.

A year ago the church finished construction of a $125,000 educational building, a project carried through under the leadership of Prof. Fletcher Kemp, finance chairman and superintendent of Arlington schools, and Homer Leigh, re-elected Sunday school superintendent at the annual meeting Thursday night.

Kemp (Financier)

Also elected were Miss Minnie Parker, church clerk; Mrs. Sadie Fox, assistant; John Balster, church treasurer; Mac Rucker, assistant; Guy Douglas, assistant Sunday school superintendent; Mrs. W. H. Leigh, president of woman's work; Thomas Christie, men's work director, and Mrs. F. E. Redwine, financial secretary.

Also recently elected were Miss Wiltshire, youth supervisor; Charles Stanton, music director; Russell Whitener, church librarian; Frank Myers, music committeeman; Mrs. A. M. Vliet, flowers; R. P. Whitener, ushers; P. M. Metz, premises; Mr. Stockett, scouting, and C. D. James, Pierce Marks, Frank Brown, Marvin Eubank, A. H. Beachley and T. H. Christie, deacons, and Mrs. Gordon Thompson, church organist.

The executive committee named includes A. C. Jones, James J. McNally, Mrs. W. H. Leigh, Mrs. F. E. Redwine, Miss Parker, Balster, Leigh, Miss Wiltshire, Myers, Mrs. Vliet and Metz.

In her annual report at the meeting Mrs. A. M. Kay, president of woman's work, revealed that 300 members of the church were studying missionary problems, and that progress was being made in caring for sick, shut-ins and needy.

Other reports showed that $19,295.63 was given in free-will offerings during 1938; that the Sunday school has an average attendance of over 500 and that there were 121 additions to the church during 1938.

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Written in Blood" and at 8 p. m. on "Living Water." The seven youth groups will meet at 6:30 p. m.

National City Sets 2 Services For Evening

Mrs. J. H. Neal, of Children's Home, to Speak at 6:30 P. M.

"Get Yourself a Challenge and Make Life Worth Living" will be the theme of the Rev. Dr. Raphael H. Miller's sermon tomorrow morning at National City Christian Church.

Two services will supplant the regular evening service.

At 6:30 p. m. a vesper hour will be held, at which Mrs. J. H. Neal, of the Children's Emergency Home of the Central Union Mission, will lead devotional exercises and Miss Ida McMillan will speak on "Our Colleges." At the same time in the Vermont avenue chapel, the Rev. Ivan H. Dugan, associate pastor, will direct young people's worship.

Ninth Street. Dr. Willard M. Wickizer, of Indianapolis, head of the Department of Evangelism and Home Missions for the Disciples of Christ, will be guest speaker at the morning worship. Robbie Virginia Young will preside at this youth month service assisted by Lydia Goss, Howard Burke, Howarton Gravatt, Clifford Jope, jr., and Junior Crowell.

The Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor, will speak on "The High Cost of Living" at the 7:45 p. m. service, at which Louise Whitney will preside, assisted by Elmer Whitney, Lowell Hamilton, Jeanette Leek and James Cecil.

Park View. "Why Men Believe in God" will be the sermon theme of the Rev. J. Lloyd Black at 11 a. m. At 8 p. m. he will discuss "what D You Stand For?"

Columbia Heights. The Rev. Arthur P. Wilson will preach at 11 a. m. at Columbia Heights Christian Church on "First Principles of a Personal Religion," and at 8 p. m. on "A Deadly Choice." The annual congregational meeting is set for next Thursday at 6:30 p. m.

Christian Science Topic 'Sacrament'

"Sacrament" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from John 6:33: "The bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." (Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock." I Peter 5:2, 33).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The rich in spirit help the poor in one grand brotherhood, all having the same Principle, or Father, and blessed is that man who seeth his mother's need and supplieth it, seeking his own in another's good."

Blind Persons Warned of Racket

The Washington Council of Social Agencies yesterday warned of a "vicious racket" throughout the Eastern seaboard with blind persons as the victims. The sightless are being urged to save empty match folders for the purpose of obtaining "seeing eye" dogs. The racket was condemned by Mrs. Harrison Eustis, president of the Seeing Eye. She said:

"Letters have been received indicating the activity is widespread. Such a thing might result in great disappointment to a blind person who, after months of careful saving of the match folders, finds that they have no effect whatsoever in determining his eligibility for a seeing eye dog. Any blind persons between the ages of 18 and 50 may apply for consideration by the Seeing Eye and complete information may be obtained by writing the organization at Morristown, N. J."

Usurping Local Powers

District officials have every reason to be indignant over the slashing of their 1940 expenditures program by the Federal Budget Bureau. Once more their carefully laid plans have been disorganized by a Federal agency that should have no control whatever over the local government. It is no exaggeration to say that such a system makes the maintenance of a responsible municipal government in the District almost impossible.

Some of the slashes made by the Budget Bureau pointedly emphasize the folly of having that agency pass upon the District's community needs. For example, the sharp cut in the estimates for the Health Department comes at a time when the community, from the White House down, is demanding more adequate protection against preventable disease. If any change was to be made in this part of the Commissioners' budget, it should have been an upward adjustment.

After conducting extensive hearings, the District Commissioners trimmed "to the bone" the requests of every department. Their budget represented the bare minimum of local needs if reasonable standards of law enforcement, education, health and relief are to be maintained. But the Budget Bureau thinks it more important to step up repayments to the Federal Government for park land than to fight disease and lawlessness.

In response to the appeals of Maj. Brown, the Commissioners had made allowance for 50 additional policemen. The Budget Bureau assumes that it knows more about the number of police needed in Washington than do the heads of the local government and the superintendent of police. So it completely eliminates the provision for additional officers.

The absurdity of this situation is not minimized by the fact that the estimates for some local institutions were left untouched or only slightly modified. Even if the Budget Bureau had proposed higher outlays for health and law enforcement, the essential issue would remain utterly untenable. The point is that this Federal agency has usurped the right of the responsible heads of the local government to make their own recommendations to Congress.

The Budget Bureau could readily correct this anomalous situation by passing on to Congress the program of expenditures prepared by local officials. Since it has consistently refused to follow that reasonable course, however, a vigorous campaign to end its jurisdiction over the District's fiscal policies has become imperative. Prosecution of that fight for a principle is even more important than restoration of the specific items that have been slashed.

The League Idea

In his message to Congress, President Roosevelt argued that "there are many methods short of war . . . of bringing home to aggressor governments the aggregate sentiments of our own people."

Many developments of recent years bear out the point that inaction is not the only alternative to war. Nor is any good purpose served by rigid neutrality legislation which in operation, as the President has said, "may actually give aid to an aggressor and deny it to the victim." The instinct of self-preservation, he added, "should warn us that we ought not to let that happen any more."

The following day, Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, went a step further. He specified the positive action which the United States should take. He demanded "moral, financial and commercial sanctions against treaty violators."

Thus after 20 years of isolationism that patently has not isolated us from the dangers that beset the world, this Nation is back where it was when President Wilson and his colleagues at Paris drew up the League Covenant. But the world has changed.

Until recently the League was a going concern. It provided potentially effective machinery for collective action against aggressors. Under the Covenant, no one nation alone was called upon to apply sanctions and thus draw the wrath of the treaty-breaking state to itself alone. The application of sanctions was the duty of all League members.

The League is now in ruins and there can be little doubt that our own unwillingness to participate in its labors was an important factor leading to the debacle. It is strangely ironic, therefore, that our statesmen, backed by a growing public opinion, are now envisaging the possibility of the United States doing alone what it had previously refused to do in concert with others.

The collapse of the League, which we never joined, has undoubtedly increased our own as every other peaceful nation's insecurity. The reaction to this alarming state of affairs is not only a demand for more armaments but also for sanctions against treaty-breaking states. It constitutes a belated recognition of realities to which, in the past, we always closed our eyes.

Barcelona's Strength

The tempo of the Spanish Civil War rises in furious crescendo as January 11, the date when Chamberlain visits Mussolini, draws close. And the essentially international character of this terrible conflict is again attested by Franco's tremendous effort to gain a clear-cut victory before this conference in Rome.

The Spanish Nationalists have had a measure of real success in the drive toward Barcelona which they launched on December 23. Day by day and mile by mile Franco's troops have pushed forward with a valiant determination matched only by the grim tenacity of the republican resistance. Both sides have shown the utmost heroism in a two-week battle which, for numbers involved and casualties incurred, is comparable with many of the major engagements of the World War. Whatever the outcome, the Spaniard, regardless of the flag under which he fights, has again demonstrated the proverbial courage of his race.

The Nationalist forces, assisted by superior military equipment and Italian "volunteers" variously estimated at from 15,000 to 25,000 men, have fought with the greatest valor. But in spite of pronounced gains they have failed to prove their contention that the Nationalist movement is entitled to govern Spain.

Even with all the foreign assistance accorded him, even with this supreme concentration of his power, the rebel leader has been unable to break the government's defenses. And an ominous sign, from his viewpoint, is the sharp and successful counterattack launched by republican troops in southwest Spain, several hundred miles from the Barcelona front. Here is further intimation, if it were needed, that Franco, despite the Moors, Italians and Germans, is not strong enough to conquer, let alone control, the nation he seeks to dominate.

If the republicans maintain stalemate on the battlefield a few more days the diplomatic victory at Rome will automatically be theirs. The issue is whether Mussolini will be able to point to a decisive victory for Franco, or whether Chamberlain will be able to argue that the rebellion, again and convincingly, has failed to show the stuff of victory. If the latter is the case a compromise settlement of the Spanish conflict will begin to be probable.

It will become probable because the British and French people are increasingly skeptical of the long-range value of progressive surrender to the dictators. And because of this they will demand that their governments give the duly-constituted government of Spain that right to purchase munitions which it is entitled to claim as a recognized sovereign state.

In London and Paris, as in Washington, the Barcelona regime is the only one recognized as having the right to speak for Spain. Nonetheless, in all those three capitals the policy of appeasement has been employed in such a way as to hamper the recognized government and, therefore, indirectly to favor those in rebellion against it. No such scrupulous "neutrality" has ever been attempted by Rome and Berlin.

The policy of appeasement has operated in Franco's favor. A constant influx of foreign troops and munitions has bolstered his military strength. The disgraceful excesses of radical elements among the loyalists in the early days of the war served to help the Nationalists long after these atrocities were stopped. Still, it appears, the Barcelona regime remains unconquerable. In the democratic countries, where both sides are allowed a hearing, opinion grows that the great strength of Barcelona must lie in the willing support accorded its government by the bulk of the Spanish people.

Scandinavia's Example

At a time when the ideal of international co-operation is honored more in the breach than in the observance, the example set by the five progressive and highly civilized northern countries of Europe—Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Iceland and Finland—is particularly noteworthy.

There has always been a strong feeling of kinship, community of interest and outlook among these nations. They have many things in common, above all equally progressive political ideals. And the developments of the past few years in Europe have tended to bring these northern countries ever more closely together.

A striking example of this enhanced spirit of co-operation is the publication of a joint official volume dealing with the place of the five nations as a group in the modern world. With the particularist spirit rampant in so many places on the globe this is a refreshing manifestation of a diametrically opposite trend.

This interesting book—"The Northern Countries in World Economy"—makes it clear that size and importance are not necessarily synonymous. The inhabitants of the northern countries number less than 1 per cent of the world's population. Taken together they are outnumbered by the populations of any one of the great European powers. Yet the economic importance of the northern bloc of states is very much greater than this fact would suggest.

Their total imports during 1936 were exceeded in Europe only by Great Britain, Germany and France, and on a per capita basis only by Great Britain. The five northern countries together thus constitute a very sizable and valuable market for a great variety of products. They possess between them 11 per cent of the world's merchant shipping. And they supply other nations with goods the value of which, in 1936, amounted to 5.12 per cent of the total world export trade, thus ranking among the largest suppliers in respect to many commodities.

This volume makes clear that the Scandinavian countries have no desire whatever to cut themselves off from their neighbors in the world community to seek that will o' wisp of self-containment which has been productive of so much evil. On the countrary, in the economics, as in the political sphere, they stand for liberty and freedom. In pursuit of that goal, however, they are joining forces to an increasing degree. In this, as in so many other particulars, they are setting a positive and constructive example.

Good Start For O'Conor

Maryland, like various other States, is giving much needed attention to the obsolete structure of its government. The current report of Governor-elect O'Conor's "Committee on the Structure of the Maryland State Government" suggests that reorganization of administrative machinery will be one of the most important tasks before the Legislature at Annapolis this year.

Mr. O'Conor wisely named a committee of experts and outstanding citizens to ascertain the weaknesses in Maryland's present administrative set-up. At the head of the committee is Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University. Its membership also includes such keen students of government as Dean G. Acheson and State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer. Despite the fact that the group had less than two months to make its investigation and write its report, the recommendations laid before Mr. O'Conor are evidence of careful work and a thorough grasp of the current problems of State government.

The advice of the committee centers about consolidation of boards and agencies that have been created in haphazard manner. Most State governments have greatly expanded their activities in recent years. In doing so they have seldom taken the trouble to consolidate related functions or to integrate new agencies with their political systems as a whole. It is not surprising, then, to find the Bowman committee recommending the abolition of ten major commissions and the creation of five new departments.

Special emphasis is laid upon the creation of a Department of Natural Resources. "The prodigal exploitation" of some of Maryland's resources, the committee found, "has been little short of appalling." A large group of related but disconnected conservation activities would be brought together in this department. Its personnel would be given permanent status under strict adherence to the merit system.

This major reorganization effort gives the forthcoming O'Conor administration an excellent start. If the democratic system is to operate successfully, its local administrative machinery must everywhere be adjusted to meet the exacting tests of modern times. Only by satisfying the demands of their citizens for effective and economical public service can the States hope to arrest the trend toward concentration of power in Washington.

The District will find these reorganization efforts particularly interesting because of the possibility that Maryland's example will hasten an overhauling of the obsolete machinery of local government in operation here.

American Axis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Now that the puerile Peruvian palavers at Lima are ended, something far more practical than palavers should be effectuated to accelerate mercantile and cultural contacts between North and South America.

Eastward from the Pacific port of Payta, near the northern boundary of Peru, lies the Pass of Porculla, which scales the Andes at an altitude of between 6,000 and 7,000 feet as contrasted with altitudes of 15,000 feet made by existing transandean, Peruvian and Bolivian railroads. In this region the Andes divide into three ranges. Between Porculla, in the western range, and the middle range flows the Maranon, which after confluence with the Huallago becomes the Amazon. The valley of the Huallago is defined by the middle and eastern ranges of the Andes.

The problem is to project and construct a great highway from Porculla over the lesser middle and eastern Andean ranges to the Isthmus of Fitzcarreld, which constitutes the watershed between the headwaters of the Ucayali and Madre de Dios rivers. Fitzcarreld has an elevation of 1,365 feet from which the highway should proceed on a level course to Santa Cruz, which stands at an elevation of 1,385 feet on the eastern plain of Bolivia. At Santa Cruz the highway should bifurcate, one fork going eastward to Rio de Janeiro and the other southward to Paraguay, Patagonia and Buenos Aires.

The highway could carry the trade of Argentina, Brazil and transandean Bolivia and Peru by land over Porculla to the Pacific port of Payta or to a new port on the Peruvian shore of the Gulf of Guayaquil and thence by fast water passage through Panama to the port of Pensacola, which is nearer by water to Panama than is New Orleans and is closer to Chicago by rail than is New Orleans.

The vital section of this American axis is the part from Porculla on the north to Fitzcarreld on the southern boundery of Peru. But this project would not work into the provincial politics of Lima and South America itself lacks the continental conscience to appreciate and effectuate it.

Current History Education

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have just finished reading the text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress. I wanted very much to hear it over the radio, but I was attending a history class at Central High School at the time.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of education as one of the protections for peace. And yet I was in school to get an "education" and was unable to hear his speech. It seems to me that it would be well worth while to have all high school pupils listen in on important events like that, that will affect them far more than Latin, English or math. In the U. S. history courses there is a feeble attempt at studying history in the making, but it does not amount to much to my mind. Some sort of current event paper is issued to each student, and one day a week important events are briefly discussed. Those publications are not certain to be free from partiality and propaganda themselves.

Now my proposal is this: There should be a compulsory four-year course in current events and modern social problems in every high school in the country. Besides studying many books, magazines and newspapers on the subject, the students should listen in on every important event at home or abroad. With the marvelous invention of radio everybody can experience things of that sort as they happen. Pupils in Washington are especially fortunate, and they should go to Congress and hear the discussions. Students should also be made acquainted with their local Governments, both city and State.

All thinking men, past and present, realize that education is the only way by which a democracy can function, and it seems to me that the plan I have outlined is much nearer education than the stereotyped courses now forced on pupils in any of the high schools I have attended.

Local Relief In New Jersey

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The movement under way to localize relief and WPA, if successfully carried out, will bring nothing but disappointment and public wrath upon the heads of its sponsors. As bad as has been the interference of national politics in the administration of relief and WPA programs, it does not hold a candle to State and municipal politics in the same programs.

We who live in New Jersey and have had a taste of State and municipal control of home relief can confidently state that relief under the ERA system was much better and more humane in its treatment of unemployed persons on its rolls. Under the ERA if the local director refused to comply with the just needs of a client, we appealed to the county supervisor and he would investigate the case and make proper adjustments. Under the present system of State and municipal relief, we have to appeal to Trenton for adjustments and in quite a few cases do not even receive a reply.

Our local poor-master in West New York is also director of relief. He is also chairman of the local Democratic county committeemen. He is also certification official for placing persons on relief on the WPA. I'll give you one guess as to whom he certifies and on what basis. The assistant director of relief and the majority of local investigators were all political appointees. Experience and qualification did not count. The result of this set-up is that a person had to belong to the right organization to receive proper aid.

For example, the WPA recently bought $15,000,000 worth of clothing to be distributed amongst the needy. All inquiries at our relief station has brought no information as to the manner the clothes will be distributed and how soon. A welfare board was appointed recently to consider complaints arising between persons on relief and relief authorities. The appointments made were purely political with no attention paid to a popular demand that a clergyman be appointed on the board.

Recently when the ruling came through to lay off WPA workers who were entitled to aid through other public agencies, a mother of eight children, laid off the local sewing project, was refused aid by our relief authorities and it took public pressure and a threat to bring legal action to make the director change his mind. This is not the first time we have had to use threats of legal action on the relief authorities to make them behave themselves.

The Price Of Milk

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The writer wonders what has become of the Consumers' Council, which has so consistently endeavored to get the most possible for consumers' dollars. This organization could, through Mr. Elwood Seal, who so ably represented the Government in the last milk investigation, ascertain all the facts necessary to insure consumers that they were getting their part of money now being taken away from the dairy farmer.

We are told that the November cut to farmers was for the purpose of lowering cream prices in Washington. Let us see how that works out. Only about 10 per cent of cream from Maryland and Virginia milk is purchased by the real consumer, while 90 per cent is sold to restaurants, hotels and wholesalers; did the two former need this reduction in order that a cup of coffee might still be bought for a nickel? No, as they were making 100 per cent on every cup of coffee sold before the cream cut. It does not look fair to us that, with the Government spending millions to help the farmer and other millions to feed the hungry people in Washington, a few people should be accumulating immense profits out of this situation.

The position taken by the milk producer is that if he has to sell his products at below cost of production some second or third party should not be allowed to make enormous profits out of these products; but that the consuming public should all receive the benefits of any reduction made in price paid the farmer. I remember that two years ago, when the controversy over a milk order for Washington was a public issue, the farmer received 4 cents a gallon raise in the price of milk, this raise was immediately passed on to the consumer in the form of 1 cent per quart advance on his milk.

The question we want answered is why the cuts we have been compelled to take were not likewise passed on to the consumer in the form of a reduction in the price he pays for his milk, rather than having been given to a favored few.

No Nazi Apologist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Apparently nobody can ask an honest question about Nazism these days without somebody accusing him of being a sympathizer. In the January 3 issue of The Post I merely asked what Dorothy Thompson meant by the "diabolically cunning, revolutionary propaganda" which she alleges the Nazis use to undermine non-Nazi governments, when—wham—the next day, one, I. Dolinsky, blasts me for being a Nazi apologist. Still he failed to explain the "cunning propaganda." What is it?

I have not noticed anything subtle about Nazi methods. Perhaps, as Mr. Dolinsky suggests, I am "naive." Maybe I do not have that famous broad view which one gets from the frozen front steppes of Russia. Despite the smear, being United States farm-raised, I still believe that barter trade, meaning an exchange of articles without the use of money, is the simplest form of trade, no matter who practices it or who gets the better of the deal.

Maybe I am just old-fashioned and simple minded that way. Most Americans are.

Questions and Answers

FOR YEARS I've tried to find the right answer to that most common of all questions: "How are you?" When it is asked automatically, the automatic retort slips out without further thought. But two-thirds of one's acquaintances ask it sincerely, even staying, unlike jesting Pilate, for an answer.

Unless one is a neurasthenic eager to run through his litany of imagined ills or a college sophomore ready to boast of his hangover—the result of a magnificent binge, of course—there seems to be no satisfactory reply.

"Very well" is brief to the point of unfriendliness. "Very well, thank you" is a little formal. It can be used only in a very limited number of cases. It is obviously the phrase for the stately old gentleman all of us salute gravely every morning on the way to work—or the grocery—or the drugstore for breakfast. There's none so poor as to be without his friendly and usually quite unknown old gentleman, to whom the dignified answer is due.

The formal acknowledgment was the only one I could give on F street the other day. My husband and I know a drinking man, an otherwise amiable fellow, who becomes fiercely paranoiac in his cups. Then he is sure that the world is set against him, that everyone hates him. Knowing this quirk of his, I am careful to speak whenever I meet him leaning well to windward.

In a Christmas shopping crowd I saw him approaching, a tell-tale vagueness in his eye. Possibly he did not see me first, but I could not take the chance on his being as blind as he looked. He would regard any neglect as the cut direct. I spoke. Out of his dream-world he gave me an extravagant greeting which rang clear above the voices of the passersby.

He said, "Hello, you beautiful, voluptuous thing, you, how are you?"

Everyone turned to stare and to realize to the full the inappropriateness of thus addressing one of my heft and honest face. I could not explain to all that anyone who saluted him just then would have been beautiful in his eyes, just as anyone who failed to greet him would have looked incredibly hideous. Before the battery of amused glances, I could only answer with unconcerned formality, "Very well, thank you." And so on my way as if I were to glamour born.

"Quite well" is a weasel answer. It seems to imply that something really is wrong, and I have known it to bring on further inquiries. "Couldn't be better" is a lie. There isn't anyone who couldn't—in health or beauty, in goods or intellectual attainments—be better at a given moment. "Fine and dandy" has too much bounce, and fits the confirmed back-slapper. The bobtailed version of that one, "Fine," is colorless when it isn't worse. Too many people who use it have a tendency to drawl it through the nose.

No answer I liked had occurred to me when my personal problem on that score was complicated by the acquisition of a baby. Now people who never bothered to ask how I was, ask with evident interest, "How's the baby?" I get it a dozen times a day, from the grocery boy, the laundry man, the lady downstairs, my friends on the telephone: "How's the baby"? There is little one can say about a very small and very healthy child; the less the better. So long as he eats and sleeps and requires changing with machine-like regularity, a mother has no worries—and no answer to the question. "How's the baby"?

For a while I replied with a cheery and truthful "Growing!" If there is anything a new-born baby does it is grow. My husband regarded with some alarm at first the speed with which our Kit put on pounds. When I said "Growing!" I made it easy for those who had asked out of kindliness but little interest to smile and drop the subject; for those who really wanted to know the details in ounces my answer supplied an opening. Unfortunately, however, this solution was good for only one use per person. On repetition it sounded fatuous.

"Good as gold" was a reply I used a few times. It was smug, but it pleased the inquirers. Everyone likes to think a baby angelic. I couldn't, however, give that one to the grocery boy who arrives every day just as Kit is shrieking for his second bottle in one feeding. Even a half minute's delay between bottles brings a horrid protest. So the boy says every day, "How's the baby? Hungry again?" And the answer is dinned in his ears.

Yesterday, I'm happy to say, an incident occurred which will give me a new reply. Kit was in his bath, with his most devoted feminine admirer—no, not his mother—in attendance. Because he has the back and neck of a future football player, I flip him over, and let him grip the edge of the bathinette to support himself while I scrub his spine. So firm a grip does he get that he frequently lifts his rubber tub and its light wooden framework clear of the floor when I lift him out of the water. This performance brought chorties of approval from his doting fan. "Will you look at him lift that tub! Just look at him."

He had done just that many times before, but only then did I realize the feat's real value. To the next person who asks, "How's the baby?" I will say firmly,

"Two months old and lifting bathtubs."

Privileged Incomes

WELL, PALS, here we are again, like Johnny Appleseed, to remind the new Congress and those who enjoy the priceless privilege of paying income taxes that there are, by the best available accounts, about 4,000,000 persons on the State, county and municipal pay rolls of the country who contribute no Federal tax on their pay and almost another million cut-rate citizens on the Federal rolls who are exempt from the State income taxes, if any, of the States where they reside.

The first group consumes about $6,000,000,000 a year of the tax money and includes, of course, many low-bracket employes who would be passed over by the collectors even if the Federal tax did apply to the public servants of the subdivisions, but it includes also many judges, mayors, sheriffs, commissioners and teachers, Governors, attorneys general and clerks of the court who draw from $60 to $800 a week, a number of whom enjoy also the assurance of good pensions on retirement and sick leave and vacations with pay.

IN NEW YORK it includes an uncommonly privileged set in the education system, those married couples who draw two fat salaries and pay the Federal tax on neither. The second group—the Federal employes exempt from the State taxes, if any—take down about half a billion a year, according to the estimates which were being used as the basis of argument at the time the subject was allowed to drop last spring.

It has been impossible to estimate the amount of taxes which would be derived from these groups if the court rulings establishing the exemption were to be reversed or revoked by legislative enactment, but guess figures have placed the Federal Government's share at $15,000,000 to $30,000,000—a range which only goes to show that nobody really knows. Still, even $15,000,000 would be worth the trouble of collection, as many nonexempt individuals have learned from experience with reviewers from the Internal Revenue Department, who spend many hours going over old check stubs and after the most searching examination of personal affairs of the accused, turn in reports requiring them to pay $18 or $150, or even as little as $2.50 extra, plus interest from due date.

INDEED, one individual taxpayer who spent a half-day of his time at the office proving that his return was correct and then was assessed $18 additional just for appearances, and paid it rather than spend another day fighting an appeal, was heard to ask, "If the Treasury will spend half a day of my time and a reviewer's to steal $18 from me, why wouldn't it be worth the clerical work involved to receive by mail and drop into the cash drawer $15,000,000 of legitimate dues?"

These exemptions date back to court decisions given long before the Federal income tax amendment was adopted and are based on a thin theory that, if an established salary of a public position be taxed, that tax is a tax on the agency by which the individual is employed. By the same theory it could be held that a tax on an ordinary working citizen in private industry is a tax on his employer, and the same answer refutes both contentions. The answer is that when a public employe draws his pay that is his money unless the loan shark or his old lady beats him to the window, and that any taxes which he pays on his income have no effect at all on his employer, whether it be the State of New York, the City of Chicago, or the County of Pottawatomie, Kans.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT gave the thing a little budge last year when he needled Congress to pass "a short and simple statute" exposing Federal salaries to the State income taxes and State, county and municipal pay to the Federal tax, on the same terms that are applied to nonprivileged citizens. It was argued that this couldn't be done without a Constitutional amendment, but the President popped back, quick like anything, that the Constitutional amendment already existed—which was something that nobody else had thought of before.

That is, everybody knew the income tax amendment existed authorizing Congress to levy taxes on income "from whatever source derived," but people, including even experts, had come to regard those court decisions as obstacles that could be removed only by another specific amendment. But, of course, when the original amendment went through after a long struggle, the words "from whatever source derived" covered the case perfectly, and the "short and simple statute" really shouldn't be necessary, although it would clarify and give force to the meaning of the amendment.

WELL, THIS little inequality which deprives the deadhead passengers on the ship of state of the privilege of paying taxes on equality with their fellow citizens probably will be remedied in this session of Congress. It helps for redress, because, after all, the mere fact of a man's giving his life to his city in the role of clerk of the court, for example, shouldn't impair his right to share the burdens of the national Government. That way lies discontent, disloyalty and rebellion.

The Record Deficit

By Mark Sullivan

44 Billion Dollars

ABOUT GOVERNMENT spending and Government debt, the central facts are:

This is the tenth successive year in which Government spending exceeds Government income.

The excess, the deficit, this year, is the greatest we have had with one exception. The exception was 1936. In that year much of the deficit was accounted for by an extraordinary circumstance, payment of the soldiers' bonus. In a true sense, the present year is the one of greate excess of spending over income.

The Government debt when Mr. Roosevelt took office was something over $20,000,000,000—the figure for July 1, 1933, was $22,539,000,000.

The Government debt this year is something over $41,000,000,000. The debt now in sight, as it will be in 1940, will be close to $44,000,000,000.

What the country should do about this is a major question of statemanship. How President Roosevelt feels about it is a major topic of Washington talk. Mr. Roosevelt, of course, cannot, at this time, think about it with detachment. He cannot think about it as an average citizen would, or as an economic or fiscal expert would. Mr. Roosevelt cannot think about it with detachment because he is himself involved in it, is in part responsible for it. His thinking about it cannot be objective. His thinking must be influenced by a spirit of self-defense and self-justification.

YET WE CAN KNOW what Mr. Roosevelt would think about it if he were detached from it and able to think about it objectively. We can know this, for we know what he said before he had any responsibility for the national debt and before the debt was so immense.

The speeches about national debt and balancing the budget, which Mr. Roosevelt made when first running for the Presidency in 1932 were not mere political expediency. They were sincere. Examination of those speeches today shows that he was gravely disturbed, even by the quite small increase of debt (from about 17 billions to about 20 billions) that had taken place in the Hoover Administration. He was aware of the peril to liberal Government that large national debt had been in Europe, the part which great national debt had in the changes in society and Government that took place there.

HAD MR. ROOSEVELT been told in 1932 at the end of his Administration the national debt would be doubled and be at an all-time high, Mr. Roosevelt would have been appalled. Probably he would have laughed at the prediction. His promises of economy, of balancing the budget, were completely sincere. We know they were sincere because they met the test of sincerity—Mr. Roosevelt acted upon what he said.

Within his first ten days in office, in March, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt sent to Congress an eloquent message saying that "for three long years the Federal Government had been on the road to bankruptcy." And with this message he sent to Congress a bill appropriately entitled "A bill to maintain the credit of the United States Government." That bill the writer of this column described as "the most courageous measure ever sent to Congress by any President and the most drastic economy measure ever enacted by any Congress."

THAT MEASURE of March, 1933, (1) reduced all Civil War pensions by 10 per cent, (2) repealed all Spanish War pension laws, (3) repealed all World War compensation and allowance laws, (4) delegated to the President power to reclassify and reduce all pensions and allowances to veterans and their dependents, (5) reduced Congressional salaries from $10,000 to $8,500, (6) authorized the President to reduce all Federal salaries up to 15 per cent.

That drastic economy was Mr. Roosevelt's first approach to the problems the country faced. But that early approach by the economy method was later reversed. The directly opposite method, free spending, was adopted. Of that economy measure of March, 1933, and of the economies effected under it, not one, I think, now remains. And the national debt of some $20,000,000,000, which Mr. Roosevelt then thought dangerous, now approaches more than double the amount.

During the six years there have been fitful alternations of policy, occasional returns by the President to the promise and policy of balancing the budget, followed by reverse to free spending. Today free spending is in the ascendant.

AS ONE SEEKS to learn what the President and those close to him really feel in their hearts about the present condition, and what they think should be done about it, one gathers that their mood, as a whole, is a curious combination of concern and bravado. Some of them believe in economy; more of them, and the ones having more influence with the President, believe in free spending. But not even the advocates of free spending, certainly not all of them, are sure about its ultimate consequences, nor free from apprehension about what it may bring. The fact is, they have got into a tide, from which escape is difficult, in which attempt to escape would necessitate reversals of previous actions and statements. Like many men thus swept along in any area of life, they have a manner of defensively shrugging their shoulders and saying, "What of it?"

Dinner Arranged For Cummings

Friends of former Attorney General Cummings have arranged a testimonial dinner in his honor for Wednesday night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Speakers will include Associate Justices Owen J. Roberts and Stanley Reed, Secretary of State Hull, Postmaster General Farley and Senator Ashurst. Frank J. Hogan, president of the American Bar Association, will be toastmaster.

447 Aliens Receive Papers Here in '38; Increase of 17%

The number of aliens who became American citizens increased 17 per cent last year over 1937, Mrs. Helen McGraw, naturalization court clerk, said in her annual report yesterday. Of 522 who applied 447 were granted citizenship, compared with 381 for the previous year.

As in other years the most numerous new citizens were Britons, but they were closely followed by Germans, frightened by European unrest into renouncing fealty to the Third Reich. Aliens not naturalized are in peril of being called back to serve in the army.

Supper Scheduled

A supper meeting of the Chi Omega Alumnae Association will be held Tuesday at the home of Gretchen Feiker, 2137 Bancroft place northwest. Hostesses will include Mrs. Joe D. Hughes, Miss Kitty Chipman, Mrs. S. Bowman Stevens, Mrs. Dallas Barr, Miss Roberta Harrison, Mrs. P. H. Steltz, Mrs. Archiebald MacFarlane, Miss Louise Erk, Miss Inez Ingham, Miss Charlotte Taylor, Miss Catherine Jones, Miss Catherine Porter and Mrs. George Wenke.

Socialists to Meet

G. S. Taylor, of Philadelphia, will speak tonight at the second in a series of lectures sponsored by the Socialist Labor Party of Washington. His subject will be "Why Is Socialism Desirable?" The meeting will be held at 808 I street northwest.

Foreign Reactions

MUCH HAS HAPPENED in the world since President Roosevelt made his famous "quarantine" speech at Chicago 15 months ago. Austria has disappeared and Czecho-Slovakia has been dismembered. With these changes, Europe's balance of power has been fantastically altered. And in the Far East during this year and a quarter, Japan's armies have steadily pushed deeper and deeper into the interior of China.

It is useless to conjecture what might have happened had the Chicago speech proved a program of action rather than a cry in the dark. Possibly, with American aid, the headlong plunge into international anarchy which the world has taken during these 15 months might have been stayed. Perhaps the centrifugal forces in Europe and elsewhere were by that time already too powerful to be held in check, even with the United States assisting in such a venture.

One thing is plain: The aggressors in Europe and Asia were not intimidated by a mere figure of speech.

IN HIS MESSAGE to Congress President Roosevelt has reverted to the same theme that engaged his attention at Chicago. But if the theme is the same, the line of attack is decidedly different.

Of all the changes that have occurred during these 15 momentous months, not the least important, certainly so far as the present world situation is concerned, is the change in the American attitude. The American people are now in the grip of the realization that the President was speaking prophetic words at Chicago when, describing the reign of international lawlessness, he said: "If these things come to pass in other parts of the world, let no one imagine that America will escape, that it may expect mercy, that this Western Hemisphere will not be attacked and that it will continue tranquilly and peacefull to carry on the ethics and the arts of civilization."

IT IS because they now realize the truth of this statement that Americans are so much concerned, at the present time, with the problem of defense, and are in favor of all necessary increases in our military, naval and air establishments. For the same reason the Lima parley probably attracted more attention in this country than any other Pan-American conference in history. And for the same reason there is clearly much more active support for positive, if nonmilitary, measures against the aggressors than there was 15 months ago.

Mr. Roosevelt did not this time, however, suggest the advisability of collective action as he did at Chicago when he said, "The peace-loving nations must make a concerted effort in opposition to those violations of treaties and those ignorings of humane instincts which today are creating a state of international anarchy and instability from which there is no escape through mere isolation or neutrality."

The fact cannot be ignored that the peace-loving nations, by the very fact of their being peace-loving, refused to make any such concerted effort. The shattered fabric of collective security will not easily be restored. But the United States cannot wait until this process of rehabilitation has been completed. At the moment, in fact, the first steps in that direction have not yet been taken. We must look to ourselves for the defense of our territory, our institutions, our beliefs.

THE UNITED STATES happens to be the most powerful aggregation of economic and financial force in the world. This is a fact which the American people have only dimly realized but which the rest of the world very much appreciates. The very circumstance, therefore, that our foreign policy, long static, is becoming dynamic may have a tremendous bearing on the world situation during the next critical months. That is why the foreign press and foreign governments have given so much attention to the President's message. Nobody underestimates the United States by Americans.

THE REACTIONS to this message abroad are very illuminating. The totalitarian nations obviously do not like it. They know it promises them no good, not only because it possibly foreshadows American economic and financial action that may hamstring them but also for the effect this stand is certain to have on Great Britain and France.

Within both of these countries there are large and powerful elements in the parliaments and among the people which are viewing with increasing distaste a policy of appeasement that is but a polite name for continuous surrender. The President's speech, and the general drift of American policy which it expresses, will tend to strengthen the hands of these elements. By the same token it will tend to weaken the present regimes at London and Paris, unless those regimes are prepared to adopt a firmer policy toward the totalitarian powers.

Indeed, this is precisely what is happening today. When Premier Chamberlain took the almost unprecedented course of issuing a personal statement approving President Roosevelt's message he was paying tribute to the pull exercised on Great Britain by the United States.

In his message to Congress, the President did not go back to Chicago but went forward from Munich. He did it wholly out of American considerations. But the effect of his speech and what it foreshadows may extend far beyond our own borders.

Today And Tomorrow

The Reconstruction Of The Democratic Philosophy

REGARDLESS of the wisdom of particular measures and policies which may follow it, the message which the President delivered on Wednesday may be described without rhetorical exaggeration as a landmark in the history of Western thought. It registers a change of ideas which is absolutely fundamental, a change not only in Mr. Roosevelt's own mind but, and this is much more significant, in the minds of the great masses of men here and abroad of whom he is, by virtue of his office, the most representative spokesman. The message marks the reconciliation which is now in progress, after more than a century of destructive conflict, between patriotism, freedom, democracy and religion.

THIS CONFLICT has divided, weakened and demoralized the whole Western world to a point where it has seemed as if the foundations of civilized life were fatally undermined.

Free institutions developed in independent and united nations as the outcome of the religious traditions of the West. Freedom, nationalism and religion are so inseparable in our civilization that when they are separated each in itself becomes destructive or reactionary. But until very recent days, until the brutal consequences had actually been made plain, the democratic philosophy has been predominantly secular and, therefore, apart from the churches, pacifist and, therefore, opposed to the army, cosmopolitan and, therefore, suspicious of the sentiment of patriotism.

In the popular philosophy which comes down to us from the eighteenth century it was on the whole assumed that religion and patriotism were opposed to freedom and democracy. This has always been the communist doctrine. But outside the communists, among the advanced progressives in all countries, though this belief has not been formulated as a doctrine, it has existed as a controlling prejudice; thus until very recently the progressive democrat was almost invariably a pacifist in favor of disarmament, an internationalist who distrusted national patriotism, and a tolerator of religion who in his heart believed that science would supplant it.

THE EXPERIENCE of the past 20 years has disclosed the fatal weakness of this progressive democratic philosophy which came down from the nineteenth century. For it has been demonstrated first in central Europe and then in the democracies of western Europe that to dissociate free institutions from religion and patriotism is to render them unworkable, and, in the last analysis, defenseless. It has been shown that the final resistance to tyranny in all the totalitarian regimes has been made not by the communist parties, for they have gone over almost as a body into the cohorts of the dictators, and not by the progressive democrats, for they have acquiesced, but by devoutly religious churchmen who alone had a conviction which made them say that resistance to tyranny is obedience to God.

It has been shown that the theologians of the churches were more discerning than the unbelieving liberals when they fixed their attention upon the anti-religious character of communism and then upon the anti-religious character of fascism as the root of the evil in those two revolutionary movements. For it has been the assault on the religious tradition of the West which has disarmed men in their resistance to tyranny; the regimented, collectivized masses of humanity are composed of individuals who have been stripped of the conviction that they are persons, not by grace of the omnipotent state but because they are made in the image of God.

THIS IS WHAT the President has understood and this, we may be sure, is what he meant when he said at the very beginning of his message that three institutions indispensable to Americans are challenged and that the first of these, religion, "is the source of the other two"—of democracy and international good faith. Words that resemble these have often been uttered by many democratic statesmen. But these very words in this precise order would not have been meant and would not have been understood until our own day by any progressive democratic leader or by the masses to whom he spoke. A conventional tribute to religion is an ingredient of many political speeches. But that the President, who is the most influential democratic leader in the world, should recognize religion as the source of democracy and of international good faith is not a mere matter of words; it is a fundamental reorientation in the liberal democratic outlook upon life.

This change has been in the making for some time and the President is reflecting faithfully a movement of opinion throughout the world. It can be observed most easily in France where the capacity to think and feel lucidly is perhaps more highly developed and more general than in any other people. Last summer, as the crisis which culminated at Munich was approaching, a most remarkable thing occurred in France: there was a reconciliation between the parties of the left, which have been violently anti-clerical since the French Revolution, and the Catholic Church; and there was a reconciliation of the labor movement, which has peen pacifist and anti-national, with the army and with the nationalistic leaders.

For the first time since the foundation of the French Republic the democratic masses, the army, and the church were not morally divided. And it was this profounder union, into which only certain plutocratic elements did not enter, that explains the collapse of the general strike and the recovery which France is making from the shock of the Munich disaster.

THE SAME GENERAL tendency is at work in all countries, in the feeling of the great masses and in the minds of the leaders of thought. The President's message reflects it admirably, and never before has he displayed so fully his gift for discerning and expressing the underlying tides of opinion which will determine the course of events.

He has seen what the democratic masses have begun to see everywhere, that if they are "to breathe the free air of a free country it is not enough to denounce tyranny and oppression abroad; it is necessary to bring to an end, fundamentally and decisively, those deep and ancient antagonisms within the democratic nations which have paralyzed and disorganized them in their conflict with revolution at home and with aggression from abroad.

AND SO, whereas formerly the masses to whom the President speaks held that social reform could be achieved only by the class struggle, in this message he tells them, what they already have begun to realize, that the class struggle must stop if the masses are to improve their lot. Where formerly they believed that patriotism and the national defense were merely the instruments of reaction, he tells them, because they are ready to hear it, that these things are the indispensable protection of democracy. Where formerly they believed that religion is either negligible and antiquated, or that it is, as communists say, "the opiate of the people," he tells them that on the religious tradition of the West, and on no other foundation, can human liberty be maintained.

AND SO this message expresses a philosophy, as new to the President as it is new to the world that heard it, a philosophy which formulates in outline the positive answer of the West to the forces which threaten to destroy the Western world. One would greatly underestimate its significance in thinking of it only as a response to the challenge of Nazism. It is in a much more important sense a response to those forces of moral disintegration which communism, fascism, and Nazism inherit and exploit.

It is an event in modern history, comparable, so to speak, with the "Communist Manifesto" of 1848. For in that manifesto there were anticipated and propounded the principal ideas which have been dissolving the structure of Western society; this message contains within it, by implication and in embyro, the outline of that reconstruction in their moral philosophy which the democracies must undertake if they are to survive.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Goldwyn

Sam—Welcome to Hollywood, Franklin!

Jimmy—I'm not Franklin; that's dad. I'm Jimmy Roosevel.

Sam—That's what comes of leaving important appointments to my subordinates! Well, anyhow, it's nice to see you.

Jimmy—I think I'm going to like Hollywood.

Sam—Why not? There's room for us both. Have you ever done anything for the movies?

Jimmy—Nothing.

Sam—This is the first time I've ever heard anybody admit it.

Jimmy—I've always been fascinated by your career, Mr. Goldwyn. You were in the movies when they were in embryo.

Sam—Yes, and when they were in Fort Lee.

Jimmy—The cinema and you were like Damon and Pythias.

Sam—I bought those two out years ago.

Sam—What kind of a figure?

Jimmy—Legendary.

Sam—If my lawyer says that's the same as colossal, okay!

Jimmy—What are my duties to be, Mr. Goldwyn?

Sam—You'll be a vice president.

Jimmy—But have I the necessary qualifications to be vice president of a great movie corporation?

Sam—Probably not. Out here we don't bother about that. All that is necessary is that you be a relative.

Jimmy—But I'm not a relative.

Sam—Nonsense. In those fireside chats your old man says he is everybody's brother. By the way, how are things in Washington or are they stupendous?

Jimmy—Washington is all right, but, after all, there is only one Hollywood.

Sam (thinking of those Federal suits)—I'm glad there is only ONE Washington!

Jimmy—What a city Hollywood is! Glamour, artistic genius, business eminence, incredible enterprise, unbelievable beauty, colossal achievement . . .

Sam—You'll get used to me in time!

Sam (after a pause)—Did you ever write any scenarios?

Jimmy—In college I wrote one, but it was very bad, and I never could sell it.

Sam—That's the only bad one my agents ever missed. Have you had any business training?

Jimmy—Don't you read the Saturday Evening Post?"

Sam—Not since Macfadden bought it. By the way, you were sick recently, weren't you?

Jimmy—Yes, I had ulcer trouble.

Sam—Out here nobody wears 'em; just light topcoats at night maybe.

Jimmy—Will I have a chance to see how pictures are made? I always wanted to find out how all that money was spent.

Sam (sadly)—So have I.

Jimmy—Do I start at the bottom?

Sam—In Hollywood nobody ever starts at the bottom. You'll start at the top and work down like the rest of us. I play no favorites.

Jimmy—When do I start and what do I do?

Sam—You just take a chair out there in the reception room and get your salary every week. In about two years we remember having hired you, and we arrange another interview. Will that be satisfactory?

Jimmy—But how about the ethical side of it?

Sam—Your religion is your own affair, Mr. Roosevelt.

Stellar Trio Panics Capacity Earle Crowds

Crosby, Murray, Austin Score on Ace Bill; Stage And Screen on Parity

"PARIS HONEYMOON." Paramount picturization of a story by Angela Sherwood, adapted to the screen by Frank Butler and Don Hartman, starring Bing Crosby, with Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff, Ben Blue, Rafaela Ottiano, Gregory Gaye and Keith Kenneth. Songs by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Three engaging fellows form a smash trinity at the Earle Theater this week to make one of the best balanced bills of many a Congressional session. Bing Crosby on the screen, and Ken Murray and Gene Austin on the stage are the trio that kept a bulging first night house at a high pitch of jollity.

In "Paris Honeymoon" Bing is his unique self. There are few screen players who, after the number of films Crosby has made, can still look forward to an apparently eternal celluloid career. No stalwart screen hero, Bing has a slight, undistinguished appearance topped by a thin crop of hair. To be sure, he has a pleasant voice and when he introduces a song it proves to be a lasting introduction. While the Crosby pipes may be well liked, it is the genial and pleasantly daft personality which wins him fans on the screen and over the air.

By merrily kidding an intentionally far-fetched tale, Bing makes "Paris Honeymoon" an easy-to-take delectable. As an American cowboy who has struck gold in unheard of quantities, Bing is surnamed "Lucky," and is about to marry the beautiful heiress, Shirley Ross, when all of a sudden the phone rings from Paris. It is the voice of Shirley's husband to explain that there has been a hitch in the divorce plans and that she had best not marry Bing, after all. "Lucky" has the notion that all this unfortunate postponemont was because Edward Everett Horton, playing—you've guessed it,—his valet, got the horseshoe of the right hind leg of a white horse and not the left hind leg. But, Bing flusters, we'll sail for Paris, anyway.

Another Bargain for a Title

Now, as all good filmgoers know, a divorce with the Industry is something to handle with care. If divorces are not ignored, they are rewarded with the proper wages of sin: prolonged and evident tragedy. But, be at rest, for the oily little count has only exchanged his old title for some of Shirley's money.

To get out of the way while the divorce is being settled, Bing buys a storied castle from a newly comic Akim Tamiroff. There he meets lovely Franciska Gaal, who has been chosen Rose Queen of the village, and must, by custom of five centuries, remain in Bing's castle for a week. Midnight high jinks occur when Bing and Horton conspire to frighten their unwanted charmer out from under the purchased ancestral roof. When Bing tries to get back to his oncoming bride, the determined Queenie employs a drink peculiar to her village to keep her American for herself. The aforesaid drink is one of those enviable vintages which all who see the picture will covet, for not only does one hear sounds deliciously sweet, but also it propels a sort of puppet animation into the unyielding body of your worst enemy.

Into this impossible tale Bing injects his unassuming and slightly puzzled air. La Gaal is a captivating native girl and Shirley Ross a smooth millionairess. Edward Everett Horton throws in a few new comedy tricks besides his tried and true quizzical look, managing to be completely amusing. Deserting mean roles for once, Akim Tamiroff has a comic part which we didn't care for, but which seemed to get large approval from the audience.

Stars Dominate Stage

Ken Murray and Gene Austin are a fine stage combination. Murray is on first, as master of ceremonies, and with his slap-happy antics and jokes—old and not too old—he creates a gay atmosphere of informality. At yesterday's first show the Picchianni Troupe seemed almost as uncertain as the audience as to what would happen next with their tumbling act, although nothing deathly transpired. It might not be a bad idea for all such troupes to cultivate such disarming uncertainty. The Roxeyettes are on several times, but in their Scotch number, featuring Loch Lomond in non-Highland tempo, they reach a new Ben Nevis. It's a swell routine and worth seeing again. Murray also introduces a performer new to our town in "Scats" Powell, a chunky fellow who "scats," contorts and do not, we assure you, sing, though he nearly stopped the show yesterday.

Gene Austin is finally on and to evident delight sings "Melancholy Baby," "Blue Heaven," "Nobody's Sweetheart Now" and "Lonesome Road." With him are Candy and Coco and with Austin, Murray and the girls they join in a freshly spontaneous finale.

An all-around good show is at the Earle. In fact, one of the best you are apt to encounter.

Little

"The Informer," that excellent film of the Irish Rebellion of 1922, is the ultimate shot of that bombardment of past hits which the International Cinema Festival has been bringing forth at the Little Theater these past six weeks.

This masterpiece of 1935 is almost too recent and too well known to raise much criticism. For the few who did not see it, the powerful and intelligent tale of the hated informer is still something not to be missed. Those who saw it in the resuscitation of Victor McLaglen as an excellent actor will recall that also in the cast were Margot Grahame, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Wallace Ford, Una O'Connor and J. M. Kerrigan. John Ford directed this devastatingly ruthless story of Liam O'Flaherty.

"The Plow That Broke the Plains," the first of the documentary films at which Pare Lorentz has since become so adept also is on the bill at the Little, a bill that is a "must" for any who missed either of the features and a known quantity for those who already have seen them.

So ends the Little's festival. For the filmgoer, it has been six weeks filled with an embarrassment of riches.

'The Duke of West Point' Takes High Place on Capitol Bill

Sterling Cast Makes Service Film Moving, Stage Bill Offers Capable Stars

"THE DUKE OF WEST POINT." United Artists-Edward Small picturization of an original screen play by George Bruce with Louis Hayward, Richard Carlson, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Joan Fontain, Charles D. Brown, Jed Prouty, Marjorie Gateson, Emma Dunn, Kenneth Harlan, George McKay, William Blakewell, Mary MacLaren, Donald Barry, Gaylord Pendleton, James Flavin, Nick Luckats, Art Raymond, Anthony Nace, Edward Earle and Alan Connor. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Previewed Tuesday, January 3. At the Capitol Theater.

It is not quite clear from the supposedly revelatory early sequences of the film why Steven Early had to go to West Point from Cambridge, which is in England, but go he did. He carried with him, beyond the best wishes of a diplomatic corps father, an intensely inflated ego and a perfect equipment for making himself profoundly disliked. That he emphatically did. So far did his violation of the traditional ethics of the United States Military Academy carry itself, as a matter of fact, that he was given "the silence"—or, in the vernacular of the institution, was "silenced"—by all of the enlisted body, barring only his faithful roommates. That is the whole gist of the picture. The excitement of the official, social and athletic life of the cadet corps always is subordinated to this major premise that the "honor code" at West Point is the thing. It is the foundation of a sound and salutary drama.

BELL

There are, of course, as has been indicated in an earlier preview column, the interpolations of scenes of the highest action and thrill—like the stupendous ice hockey game that brings the picture to a climacteric close, for example, but the real "punch" of the opus still imposes in the character building the West Point regime exerts over all of the stalwart young men who fall under its influence. There was a question at one time whether the military authorities would sanction the showing of "The Duke of West Point" by the very reason of its violation of the "honor code," a vital factor of its development. All objections seem to have been swept aside in view of the enormously moving message the film is able to impart by an unconventional but ringingly true depiction of the consequences of a violation of the most cherished tradition of the academy.

Star Breaks All the Rules

But to get back to Mr. Steven Early, a finely equipped lad with the mental acumen and the social graces to become a leader in any circle in which he might be placed. Mr. Early gets off on the wrong foot at West Point and continues to pile up demerits almost to the last foot of the celluloid. But his admirable motives smooth everything out for him at the end. As in all service pictures within the memory of man still going to the "movies," Steve violates all of the rules, fights his way into the respect of those who thought him a "pushover" and tramples on any number of toes in his pursuit of dramatically sound portrayal of what might really go on at West Point and why all who have graduated from that strict seat of higher learning revere their alma mater with an intensity that rather transcends the sentimental attachment of other alumni for other colleges.

"The Duke of West Point" has directed and acted with a fine regard for the noblest traditions of a noble institution. The cadet life at West Point is made a real and living thing. It has, furthermore, been surrounded with all of the "glamour," color and fascination that attaches to a branch of the armed service of the United States whose honor roll runs over with the names of national heroes. In the pivotal roles of the picture, Louis Hayward, as Early; Tom Brown and Richard Carlson, as his roommates; Alan Curtis, as Early's Nemesis in many of his transgressions; Joan Fontaine, as the girl in the case; Jed Prouty, Marjorie Gateson, Emma Dunn, Kenneth Harlan, Mary MacLaren, Edward Earle, Charles D. Brown, Jonathan Hale and a long list of others all contribute notably to the dramatic, melodramatic, comic and romantic aspects of a story that is one of the best of its kind to find its way to the screen.

Stage Also Is Notable

The stage bill at Loew's Capitol this week also embodies much that will intrigue the interest of the judicious show-shopper. Bert Walton serves as master of ceremonies and, as usual, vitiates the intended comic effect of his highbrowism by mispronouncing words right and left and otherwise jumbling up the king's academic English. He comes out right side up, at that, not only in his own stage specialty, with a singing "stooge" of more than ordinary worth, but also builds up a might audience enthusiasm for the individual acts he introduces. These include Sara Ann McCabe, a soprano of more than usual capabilities; The Debonairs, six singing and dancing young men who do their best work in a number called "Machinery," in which they impersonate robots, and, of course, the ravishing Chester Hale Capitol Comets in a series of their most engaging precision routines.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions round out a program that will send no one out from the house with the sense of having been cheated.

Is Heartthrob of the 'Point'

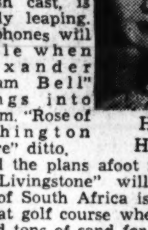
JOAN FONTAINE

cast in the principal feminine role in "The Duke of West Point," featuring Louis Hayward, Alan Curtis and Tom Brown, which opened yesterday as chief screen attraction for the current week at Loew's Capitol Theater. Miss Fontaine has the feminine field practically to herself in this faithful reflection of the spirit of the Military Academy.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 6.—Twentieth Century-Fox was practically at a standstill during the holiday season but is certainly off to a grand start in the new year. The "Hound of the Baskervilles," with Basil Rathbone and an all-English cast, is already leaping. The phones will tinkle when "Alexander Graham Bell" swings into rhythm. "Rose of Washington Square" ditto.



HEDDA HOPPER

And the plans afoot for "Stanley and Livingstone" will floor you. Part of South Africa is being built on that golf course where they imported tons of sand for "Suez," and Walter Brennan's part is being built up beeg since his theft of "Kentucky," which warms all our hearts. "Cisco Kid," with Warner Baxter, is rolling. "Sussanah" is just about to get the gun. Then "The Gorilla," with the mad Ritzes—a natural—something for them to go to Bogeytown on.

"The Rains Came" won't start until March. Understand they're searching under the hedgerows of England for a man to play the lead, while casting two of our best American girls, Myrna Loy and Nancy Kelly, in the other important English parts. Some of our American voices take on the tone of grace notes when it comes to accents—others are just the opposite.

One of the nicest parties of the New Year was the reunion of the "Better 'Ole" company given by Charles Coburn to his old pals, Charlie McNaughton and Colin Campbell, who were in the original company with him. Coburn is the only "Old Bill" left. Other stars who played it were DeWolf Hopper, James K. Hackett and Macklyn Arbuckle. Each one of them made a fortune on it.

Coburn cleaned up half a million dollars the first nine months of the New York run. I'll bet Bruce Bairnsfather never dreamed of anything like that when he drew those war cartoons to amuse his buddies. Director George Cukor stopped by to pay his respects. He played the French porter in one of the companies.

Doug Corrigan cracked at last and gave a present to himself—a haircut for the new year. He used to whittle his own when he was too hard up to hire a barber.

There's no doubt that David Selznick suffered a genuine loss when he accepted the resignation of Russell Birdwell. Because David said he "considered Birdwell the best press agent and ambassador of public good will in Hollywood." Which is high praise in any man's language. However, David hasn't lost him, because he'll be one of Birdwell's new clients—the others being Carole Lombard, Ronald Colman, Janet Gaynor and Norma Shearer. Quite a nice stable of colts to start any new business. Understand Louie B. Mayer will be the next one to sign up. What for, his racing stable? Congratulations!

"Big Boy" Williams was having a set-to with Ann Sheridan on the "Dodge City" set. "Big Boy" yelled, "Where I come from we keep our women in the kitchen."

"Yes, but when I get a man in the kitchen I listen to the radio while he washes the dishes," snapped Ann.

Leon Turreau, former G-man who suggested the Nazi spy story Warners is doing, is being wined and dined. How about giving him a public banquet, and sending the proceeds to charity, so we could all meet him?

Paramount certainly muffed by not signing Virginia Weidler when they had her for "Men With Wings." Now M-G-M has taken care of that little item and she continues on in the Hardy pictures. I like Mickey Rooney, but he should take a few lessons in modesty from Virginia.

The midgets at Metro have driven the policemen frantic. They can't tell one from the other. Consequently, all those little people get in all of their relatives, too.

Mervyn LeRoy has a hit in "Stand Up and Fight." The picture is packed with punchy atmosphere which is very entertaining. And Wally Beery is at his Beery best. Now I'm hoping they'll use somebody else instead of Bob Taylor for a punching bag—he's proved to the world he can "Can Stand Up and Fight."

I was so busy looking for the trick photography and all the mechanical perfection, not to mention the signal for Connie Bennett's disappearance, in "Topper Takes a Trip" that I just couldn't keep my mind on Topper. Every time Connie raised her hand, I said, "There she goes" and by golly, she did.

It wasn't quite cricket for Warner Brothers to give John Garfield "They Made Me a Criminal" after his wonderful performance in "Four Daughters." The picture was such a mixture of good and bad, mostly the latter, that you couldn't help thinking what a waste. There was a swell scene of Garfield and the Dead-End Kids trying to keep from drowning in a huge water tank, which I'd seen a long time ago in one of their shorts. I may be old-fashioned, but I still don't think it's entertaining to see a tough kid spit. Mr. Garfield deserves something better than "They Made Me a Criminal."

Metropolitan

"DEVIL'S ISLAND." Warner Brothers picturization of an original story by Anthony Coldewey and Raymond L. Schrock, adapted to the screen by Don Ryan and Kenneth Gamet, featuring Boris Karloff with Nedda Harrigan, Pedro de Cordoba, James Stephenson, Aida Kuznetzoff, Edward Keane, Robert Warwick, Will Stanton, Richard Bond, Earl Gunn, Charles Richman, Leonard Mudie and Frank Reicher. Directed by William Clemens. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At the Metropolitan Theater.

"Devil's Island," which as photoplay fodder last figured as the scene of the martyrdom of Dreyfuss, gave Paul Muni a chance to be eloquent. In this depiction of its inmates, Boris Korloff gives a far different interpretation of the manner in which prisoners react there.

Karloff, once one gets accustomed to his not being in Frankenstein disguise, is recognized as a capable actor of the restrained mental type. He suffers and suffers and deeper grow the furrows in his noble brow. Which is not intended in a facetious manner, for we like Mr. Karloff.

Sentenced to Devil's Island for giving medical assistance to a convicted felon who is is friend, Karloff is marked from the first for special persecution. That his skill as a brain surgeon will be called for is foredained. His escape, recapture, and subsequent trip to the guillotine, to be rescued ere the ax falls, is exciting, though it has all been told before in pictures and books.

Apparently the motive for the making of the picture was to show how criminals on the island were formerly treated, and the note of reform introduced by the prison commissioner at the end seems to imply no slap at France was intended by the brutal expose of the animalistic life the prisoners were forced to lead.

Mark this as "fair," and not through any fault of Mr. Karloff, who deserves fresher material and other than prison garb.

Making their debut in a lurid short directed by Charles Chase, titled "The Flat-foot Stoogies," are the Three Stooges, too long absent from the Met. screen. This time they are firemen with a couple of horses named Annie and Fannie, to drag their engine. The villain is a cur who thinks the firefighting unit should be mechanized. Included in the hilarious events participated in by the gusty trio is a turkish bath for the horses, and a fight between a bulldog and mouse which the former loses.

A compilation of Paramount and Universal newsreels has shots of Daladier, British troops and Arabs shaking hands, and fine views of all three of the Bowl games. Mrs. Roosevelt's part in the gifting of incubators for premature babies to Sibley Hospital by the Variety Club, and portions of the President's speech to the Congress.

"Swingtime In the Movies" has a nitwitty director and a harebrained assistant monkeyshining over a make-believe lot in Hollywood, surrounded by lovely blondes and all done in masterful Technicolor.

Grim Business Is Afoot on Keith's Screen

Victor McLaglen Stars Effectively in Testy Drama, 'Pacific Liner'

"PACIFIC LINER." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Anthony Coldeway and Henry Symonds, adapted to the screen by John Twist, starring Victor McLaglen and Chester Morris, with Wendy Barrie, Alan Hale, Barry Fitzgerald, Allan Lane, Halliwell Hobbes, Cyrus W. Kendall, Paul Guilfoyle, John Wray, Emory Parnell, Adia Kusnetzoff and John Bleifer. Directed by Lew Landers. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

The ship's doctor has a headache, the ship's nurse has a heartache, the chief engineer gives everybody an ache in the neck—but the dirty huskies down in the stokehold have aches all over because they have with them an invisible stowaway, the Asiatic cholera.

So "Pacific Liner" ploughs through the blue seas with the passengers frolicking on deck while the "black gang" below decks feeds the furnaces and thinks black thoughts of revolt, homicide and suicide. But the elephantine lovemaking of Victor McLaglen (chief engineer), the love affair of Chester Morris (ship's doctor) and Wendy Barrie (ship's nurse), pick out a brighter pattern of comedy against the background of death and the plague on the high seas.

Essentially, "Pacific Liner" is the "pleasure cruise" version of the old pirate theme of "Sixteen men on the dead man's chest, Yo-ho-ho! and a bottle of rum." The modern version of the "dead man's chest" is a dead man's winning sweeps ticket which the survivors of the "black gang" are supposed to divide when they reach port.

A Complete Son-of-a-Gun

As chief engineer Victor McLaglen has one of those parts that only he can do. His veins run coal dust and whisky. He has a girl (or a dozen) in every port, but his true loves are his engines and his record of always driving a ship into port on schedule. The "black gang" love him and hate him at the same time. They revere him because he's such a complete son-of-a-gun, but they'd esteem it a privilege to cut his heart out at the same time. Vic is getting along in years, but he shows it only in his face. Hollywood will never find another gorilla to match him.

When McLaglen hauls a pathetic Chinese stowaway out of hiding, the the action really begins. The Chinkie is dead next morning. The doctor says it's cholera. The stokehold is isolated. The Great Reaper with the scythe sits down beside the boys with the shovels. One by one they drop off. For them no picturesque burial at sea. They are tossed into the roaring furnaces as an old stoker reads from his Swedish prayer-book. Br-rr!

While Chester Morris and Wendy Barrie give smooth and sufficient performances, the heroes of "Pacific Liner" are McLaglen and a half-dozen superlative character actors, including Barry Fitzgerald, Alan Hale and Allen Lane, all portraying the dregs of the sea. Despite its social implications, there is little of social consciousness in the script of "Pacific Liner." Any social angle finds its reflection in the performances of the character actors as brutalized and miserable microcosms of humanity.

Reveals Fine Realism

The montages of engines, controls and the sea, credited to Douglas Travers, were splendidly done, more impressive than many of the human sequences.

The newsreel seems satirical (unintentionally, perhaps) this week in its exposition of the American scene. It contrasts pictures of the Presidential speech, Earl Carroll's new night club, the Mooney pardon and the Rose Bowl game.

Held over is the newest "Three Little Pigs" picture, dealing with the Practical Pig's newest tour de force, a lie-detecting machine which entraps the Big Bad Wolf, the other two little pigs and, finally its inventor.

Refreshing is a sports short with pictures of wild geese flying in battle plane formation. Or perhaps these formations were invented by the geese in the first place. Anyway, the formations are broken up by hunters' guns and Chesapeake Bay dogs are shown retrieving goose dinners.

Boy Golfer Winner Of Hollow Victory

Donald O'Connor, boy star, competed in a studio golf tournament over the week-end and finished fifteenth in a large field of adults, with a score of 96.

The youngster was elated, for prizes in the competition ranged from thoroughbred puppies and target rifles to stop watches and clasp knives.

A truck drove up to the door of Stage 4, where Donald was working in "Tom Sawyer, Detective," Monday morning and unloaded the fifteenth prize

It was 24 quarts of motor oil.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 6.

MRS. JOHN ROOSEVELT: Did you know that the wedding of your sister, Sally Clark, to George McLanahan practically had a commercial sponsor? They posed for a series in photos portraying the various stages of their romance—beginning with first meeting, then a tennis scene in Bermuda, dancing at Nassau, etc.—right up to the final picture, which was the wedding photo. Sally posed while washing her face—because these photos will be used to advertise a soap!

JIMMY HINES: Friends of Lloyd Stryker, your counsel in the recent trial, insist that he'll receive a Federal appointment . . . Jock Whitney: Haven't you been telling film producers that the Scarlett O'Hara role will go to Vivian Leigh? . . . Duchess of Kent: Mae Chaplin, your manicurist, who has held the hands of London's bluest socialites, is on her way to America for a movie job. She's one of Charlie Chaplin's closest kin.

HERMANN GOERING: Quentin Reynolds, of Collier's, went to Germany last month for his magazine . . . There Reynolds saw the concentration camps and the refugees. Your police did not molest him—because, while his passport revealed that he was a "writer," he kept exhibiting a copy of Collier's which included one of his light fiction stories. Your men were unaware of the fact that another issue of that magazine featured Reynolds' best-known writing—the first and exclusive report of the Haitian-Dominican warfare and his expose of Dictator Trujillo.

CLARK GABLE: Do you realize that you told the editors of the 1939 edition of Britain's Who's Who that you already are divorced from your current wife, Rhea Gable? . . . Hazel Forbes: After you were removed from the hospital the other day your husband, Harry Richman, was stricken. He couldn't perform that night because of his condition . . . L. B. Mayer: Luise Rainer will spend the rest of this winter in New York, with Clifford Odets. She probably will appear in Sidney Kingsley's play, "The Outward Room." Van Heflin will have the supporting role.

WILL HAYES: John Swope, whose book of Hollywood photos, "Camera Over Hollywood," will be released for publication next month, was in a midtown restaurant this week and discovered that the proprietor had managed to secure six advance copies . . . "If you want me to," the author volunteered, "I'll autograph my books for you" . . . "No, thanks," he was told. "They've already been autographed—by your uncle, Herbert Bayard Swope."

CONSTANCE BENNETT: On New Year's eve George Washington Hill went to the Persian Room and there heard your brother-in-law, Morton Downey, sing. Hill thereupon fired practically the entire singing cast of his Pall Mall radio program and hired Downey . . . Thomas Mann: Eddie Cantor and Abe Lyman appeared at the Grossinger dance at Manhattan Center Thursday night. Jenny Grossinger will devote the entire proceeds to Cantor's fund to resettle refugee children . . . Mussolini: Westbrook Pegler, who is being attacked by your Fascist press, is going to Europe next week . . . Nicholas Murray Butler: The members of your Columbia Law School faculty are giving drinking parties for the students. At least 60 attend each time.

ALF LANDON: Because their Charlottesville home has been destroyed by fire, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., now keep their infant son at the White House . . . The President, before rising each morning, sends for the baby and plays with him for a half hour . . . "That's good," F. D. Jr. confided this week. "The first words my son will learn to say will be: 'My friends.'"

BRENDA FRAZIER: The 14 men-about-town who recently sponsored the debut of a Tugboat Cinderella, as a protest against the publicity accorded your presentation to society, will tender another such event very shortly. Burgess Meredith and Franchot Tone have joined the list of sponsors.

ELLSWORTH VINES: Don Budge is angry at you because of the radio speech you made after your defeat. Budge told friends: "Now I'll lick that guy for 20 straight games . . . Fritz Kuhn: Herr Goebbel's domestic squabble and his wife's attempt to sue him didn't occur last week, as reported by the press. On November 1, in this column, appeared: "Frau Goebbels, wife of Germany's propaganda minister, is trying to leave the country. She can't find a lawyer willing to handle her case."

Wedding Bells to Ring for Players

Wedding bells will ring for Broderick Crawford and Rita Johnson when the actor establishes himself more firmly in his career.

Crawford, just back from New York, where he scored the season's hit as Lennie in "Of Mice and Men," revealed that on the set of "Ambush," in which he has a featured role with Gladys Swarthout and Lloyd Nolan. He's the son of Helen Broderick, noted stage and screen actress.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 6.

ONE OF the occupational diseases of the chronic New Yorker is what might be called "elevator fear." We do not live or work on the good earth, like normal humans; we exist and labor in lawyers, sometimes hundreds of feet in the air. Yet so used are we to shooting these vast distances in "lifts" that we almost never give a thought to it.

Of course, we are conscious of this unnatural way of life when we are catapulted a long way. For instance, when we leave our stomach on the eightieth floor of the Empire State Building and only recover it as we leave the building or when we get an earpounding as we plummet earthward from Mr. Rockefeller's night club on the sixty-fifth floor of the RCA Building—just as we do when an airplane glides fast and smoothly to a landing. But these are exception. For instance, I live on the sixth floor of my house in Murray Hill, and ride the elevator a dozen times daily—but am no more conscious of it than if I were stepping off the curb into J. P. Morgan's Rolls-Royce.

And so when something does happen to an elevator in this town of them, we get a definite shock. For instance, the other night Mrs. Archibald Douglas had a few friends in at her apartment on East Seventieth street. When the party broke up, she and some of her guests stepped into the car at the seventh floor and started for the street level. But something went sour—and it fell. The hostess ended up in hospital with a broken leg—a bum ending to a nice evening. And only seven floors. In spite of close inspection, these things can happen. And the plight of Mrs. Douglas made us all think a moment.

But, shucks, it only lasted a minute. We cloud dwellers are no more conscious of "elevator fear" than if we were decent, sensible folk who lived on the ground, where people are supposed to live. We're a little wacky.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, it is a pleasure to report that our town is almost normal, after the late holiday shambles. I hope and believe yours is, too. But, of course, "normal" for this madhouse is over par for any State asylum you care to name. That's the way the city and its mumblers are gaited—and it's much too late to do anything about it.

Of all the mother-and-daughter teams of the winter, the one that has interested me most is Gloria Swanson, late film dream girl, and her daughter Gloria, Junior. The kid is now a real young lady, dances like a streak, and has all mama's smartness. But Mother Gloria fears nothing from the juniors—she still has plenty on the ball, and collects all stares whenever she turns up at a local dance palace—which is often. Oddly, both the ladies were yellow dinner dresses when I saw them, but Junior's was darker than Mom's. A great looking couple, in any league.

The Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, who has been glamoring up the village of late, was once Kitty Spottswood, of Philadelphia. Just one of our American girls who collected a handle to the name. This is Kitty's first visit to her native land in 20 years. Must be a wonderful country. She wandered into an art gallery the other day in a swell suit of black broadcloth and sealskin—with the proper trimmings. Listen, Kitty—pardon me, Baroness, old cutie: "Just what do you think of the United States, after two decades?" Incidentally, the Baroness Kitty made the Paris varsity this year—the best-dressed team. Those Rothschilds still have quite a roll of roubles, in any currency.

Elsa Maxwell, the noted author, gave one of her cute, intimate dinners the other night. Only 50 sat down to table. They consisted of the very best pets of her gang.

Millinery Takes to the Woods

The languorous-eyed lady above admits she's a blockhead by wearing the rakish sailor which is as wooden as her matching handbag. Although wooden motifs are not new in the designing field, this spring will beckon chic women to the woods more enticingly than ever. Chemical research here has made an alliance of New England silver birch veneer laminated with a clear cellulouse plastic. Louiseanders created this marquetry patterned woodsy set and strung a fabric drape through the back of the hat brim

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is Man Ever So Fortunate as to Find the Wife He Considers Ideal, Or Is Compromise Inevitable?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Being male and past 21, I find many problems confronting me in the matter of selecting a suitable girl to be my wife. I have gone with many girls and have met several who have appealed to me—each in different ways. However, in each case, there was always something that I could not like. For instance, one girl is attractive, intelligent and willing to do without servants, if necessary—but she is deceitful.

Another is smart, witty, virtuous and religious and would always be completely loyal—but I don't believe I could stand her face, year in and year out. Still another is plenty attractive to the eye, and I wouldn't mind exhibiting her as my wife. She would always pull with me and not against me—but she hasn't the education I would want my life partner to have. And thus it is with every girl I meet—always something comes up to spoil the picture.

My question is this: Does a man ever find the girl whom he can sincerely regard as THE ONE, the Ideal? Or do we have to accept the fact that everyone has faults, and that the wisest thing to do is to marry the girl who is the least worst of the lot? Sincerely yours,

VIRGINIAN.

The Pursuit of Visions

DEAR VIRGINIAN: Your questions recall to mind certain remarks made in my hearing a few years ago by a man who is something of an authority on human behavior and social relationships. He said (in effect): "A man who looks for, expects to find, or expresses disappointment in not finding, the Ideal Woman, is a damn fool. There is no such thing, any more than there is an Ideal Man. Of course, it's natural to the average man to do a certain amount of pipe dreaming about the ineffably desirable creature he hopes one day to meet and marry, but usually he winds up in double harness with some girl who has no more claims to perfection than he has. And what does he find? If he's a decent sort of fellow and she's a decent sort of girl, he finds that the reality of Just Plain Woman is a darn sight better than any opium dreams of femininity he ever hador ever could have—cooked up in his own imagination."

All this was said apropos of a certain absentee gentleman under discussion, who (then a bachelor in his latter thirties) was wont to lament the fact that he had spent a lifetime "hotfooting it across the world in pursuit of visions," only to have them turn to ashes in his grasp. Bitterly disappointed by each successive woman's failure to measure up to his romantic image of feminine desirability, this man had come to the point where he habitually mocked at love and the fair sex generally. According to his critic, this man's consistent failure to find contentment and completion in an enduring love relationship was intrinsically a personal failure, constituting no valid indictment of the opposite sex, individually or collectively. Such men, he pointed out, are paying the inevitable penalty for failing to make a rational adjustment to the realities of life and in their evasion and cowardice being dishonest with themselves and unfair to women.

However, I do not mean to imply that you, in your erstwhile fruitless search for a suitable mate, have been falling into the same error. I think only that in your headlong eagerness to enter upon an adult's way of life, you are behaving like a wild-eyed lady shopper hunting feverishly for a find at an end-of-the-month bargain sale. You don't know what you want, but you feel a great urge to put your money on something—so now which, or what, shall it be? The best advice one can give a person under such circumstances and in such a frame of mind is—hold everything!

Time enough to make an investment when you know better what you want, in the way of tangible and procurable values, and have a place in your scheme of things for the object desired. As a male who probably is just "past 21," it is highly unlikely that you are prepared, in any way, to undertake marriage. Your questions suggest as much. They lean to the foolish side. The best that can be said of them is that they smack of collegiate "bull session" theorizing of the most formless and grouping sort. And for such questions there are no literal answers.

The nearest approximation to a suitable answer that one can make is this—curb your (largely theoretical) impatience to be married, and give yourself time to fall in love. Once the divine afflatus overtakes you, as it inevitably will, you either won't perceive or won't care that the lady is as deceitful as Ananias, as ugly as mud, as unlettered as a bushman, so long as she is willing to share your fate. Of course, that's putting it a little strong; but still, it's more or less the way love works. Once a man is under its spell, whatever painful doubts and misgivings he may feel are largely inspired by his own belatedly sensed shortcomings. Who am I, poor unworthy creature that I am (thinks he), to presume to this matchless mortal's hand?

I am told by a highly erudite, delicately cynical and altogether happily married man that the young American male takes a wife for the following reasons: 1. For love. 2. Because the lady maneuvered him into a corner and he couldn't get away. And, 3. For reasons of social or financial expediency, or, as he amended, "because she happened to be th boss' daughter." He thinks that by far the greater number marry for love, "and in that case," he says, "the poor fellow can see no fault in the lady, although he sometimes revises his opinion at a later date."

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Helping Prunes

To improve the flavor of stewed prunes, cook a slice of lemon and a cinnamon stick with them. A speck of salt added to any fruit sauce helps bring out the flavor.

The Gentler Sex

When Dues Are Due

PRESIDENT—Now much as I hate to bring this up—girls please be quiet a minute—we have got to take some action about those members who have not paid their dues

MRS. LIGHTCAP—Say, have I paid mine?

MRS. CHIPP—Madame President, I just want to say that I know I've paid my dues. I remember it distinctly because I gave the treasurer a $10 bill——

CHORUS—Well, I know I've paid mine

PRESIDENT — Girls! Girls! Please one at a time. All right, Mrs. Pry.

MRS. PRY—I just wanted to inquire how many members have NOT paid their dues.

PRESIDENT—We'll have the treasurer report—where is the treasurer?

CHORUS—Mrs. Posey?

MRS. POSEY—No, I was the president last year. Mrs. Whipper's the treasurer.

MRS. SAPP—Say, I sent my dues to Mrs. Posey——

CHORUS—So did I!

PRESIDENT — Girls! Girls! Mrs. Whipper, will you report?

MRS. WHIPPER—Three active and 13 honorary members have not paid their dues.

PRESIDENT—Now, according to the constitution, the deadline for dues was September 1.

MRS. JAY—Madame President, may I say that I think that is a very inopportune time of the year to have the deadline? Nearly everybody is buying their fall clothes then——

MRS. LIGHTCAP—I was just getting my fall hat——

MRS. POSEY—I got mine in August——

PRESIDENT—Girls, please if you have anything to say, say it to the chair. All right, Mrs. Close.

MRS. CLOSE—Now I want it understood I'm not speaking for myself, but I've heard a lot of members say they think $5 is too high for the dues. Now there are some very lovely women who have a hard time getting hold of $5——

DR. NANNIE B. HOPPER—Well, if they have to get it out of a man they do!

MRS. DOODLE—Well, I just want to say that Mr. Doodle is perfectly wonderful about things like that. He always turns over all of his money——

MRS. FLINT—I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT — Girls, please keep to the subject. All right, Mrs. Joyner.

MRS. JOYNER—Well, I want to say that I think $5 is very little to pay for the privilege of belonging to a club like this. Think of the contacts you get here. Another thing, I've always found in my travels that it helped. I know the summer Mr. Joyner and I were in Europe——

MRS. FLINT—Question! 'Question!

PRESIDENT — Will someone make a motion?

MRS. SMART—I move we drop from our roll all members who haven't paid.

MRS. YEAMAN—I second the motion.

MRS. SMILEY—Just a minute, Madame President! Maybe they didn't get their notices.

CHORUS—I never get my notices.

MRS. WHIPPER — Madame President, I just want to say that I sent each of these members 17 notices and called them each on the phone 11 times.

DR. NANNIE B. HOPPER—A men's organization would never stand for this.

MRS. PRY—May I inquire if these people who haven't paid are—well important members?

PRESIDENT—One is a very important member.

MRS. CHIPP—Madame President, I just want to say again that I'm sure I paid——

CHORUS—So have I!

PRESIDENT — Girls, please! None of the members who haven't paid are here.

MRS. SMILEY—Madame President, I move we give these members one more chance and send them a nice letter——

PRESIDENT—There's a motion before the house to drop these members.

MRS. PRY—Madame President, may I suggest that before we take any drastic action, we appoint a committee to ascertain in a nice way if these members can afford to pay dues.

MRS. YEAMAN—Second the motion.

PRESIDENT—There's already a motion——

MRS SMILEY—Madame President, I think these members ought to have one more chance.

MRS. JAY—Well, the rest of us have to pay.

DR NANNIE B. HOPPER—Madame President, I have an idea! Now I think we should proceed tactfully in this matter and not hurt anybody's feelings. To throw these members out would be—well, just a little drastic. Since we have been unable to reach them by letter or telephone, why not put their accounts in the hands of a good collection agency?

CHORUS—Fine!

DR. HOPPER —Therefore I move an amendment postponing action on dropping the members until the collection agency makes its report.

CHORUS—Second the motion!

New Peach Dessert

For delicious simplicity canned peaches and cream have always been a perfect dessert. But when combined with marshmallows and coconut—they are extra special. Of course, for such a dessert dish, you'll want peaches that are perfect—just right in size; just right in color.

Place one marshmallow in the hollow of each peach half and sprinkle over with coconut. Pop under the broiler flame until delicately browned and serve. Isn't that simple And its delicious!

Rapid-Pace Hiking Aids Figure And Nerves, Declares Singer

Bess Johnson Often Walks Two Hours Daily
Suggests Special Exercise for Throat
Starts Day With Lemon Juice, Hot Water

By special request Miss Kain's 21-day reducing diet is being reprinted. Please clip and save menus at end of this column.

By Ida Jean Kain.

BESS JOHNSON has the reputation of being the "streamlined lady of the airwaves" . . . and we find that she keeps her figure lovely in a vrey mysterious way. She diets and exercises!

And there's more novelty in the discovery that the attractive blonde radio singer takes these two measures as matters of course. With Miss Johnson, exercise is just in the day's work. She has made it a routine of daily living, in the conviction that "If women would exercise in their 30's, there wouldn't be any dangerous 40's.

She believes in both outdoor and indoor exercise, with an especial preference for horseback riding and walking. Since she works five days a week and can't always take time for outdoor recreation during the day, she often spends two hours hiking at a rapid pace before going to bed. "The night air seems to be just as good for me," Miss Johnson explains, "and walking is an ideal way to relax. It takes care of high strung nerves and taut muscles—it's a sedative."

Neglect Exercise

As a rule, women neglect their exercise in the winter. If they swim, it's only during the summer months. But Miss Johnson finds she can swim just as well in an indoor pool—it still brings every muscle in the body into play! As for getting the sun—many pools now offer 15 minutes under a sun lamp for a quarter.

In addition to general calisthenics on a mat, this streamlined star does a bit extra for her throatline. She has one exercise, and she does it morning and night. Here it is: Stand erect, and turn the head sharply to the right, then to the left. Face forward, and lift the head high out of the shoulders. Then gradually drop it forward until the chin rests on the chest.

Few Dietary Rules

Miss Johnson has very few dietary rules, but she lives up to the ones she has. She starts the day with a glass of hot water and lemon juice, she takes very little seasoning on food, and avoids gravy and pasteries. In the mid-afternoon she has a glass of carrot or tomato juice, and always eats six vegetables a day. Those dietary rules, plus the exercise, account for an exquisitely lovely skin.

Diplomatic Parties Hold Society's Interest

French Ambassador Will Entertain Tonight for Justice and Mrs. Hughes; Turkish Envoy Host at Dinner

WITH SEVERAL of the embassies and legations beginnings to emerge from mourning, diplomats hold the social spotlight this week-end with a number of entertainments of interest to Capital society.

Tonight the French Tmbassador, Count Rene Roynel de Saint Quentin, will entertain at a dinner for over 20 in honor of the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes. The Chief Justice prefers to sally forth into society only on Saturday evenings, so the season finds him often dated up as much as several months ahead by those who wish to entertain him and Mrs. Hughes.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, who have until recently been in mourning for Kemel Astaturk, were hosst at a luncheon yesterday in honor of the Charge d'Affaires of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet.

The Spanish Embassy was the scene of a gay tea yesterday afternoon when Senorita Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Ambassador and Senora de los Rios, had a few of her friends in between the hours of 5 and 7. Senorita de los Rios will return tomorrow to Wellesley College, where she is teachin and studying this year. She entertained at luncheon earlier in the week for some of the classmates.

Minister's Wife Hostess at Tea

Owing to the crowds of people who turn up when the times of diplomatic "at homes" are published — in former days whole buses loaded with sightseers would invade an embassy and descend on on the tea table like a horde of locusts—many hostesses now limit these parties to their own personal friends. They either send out invitatio or write the dates of their at homes on calling cards which they leave on their acquaintances.

Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the South African Minister, is one who prefers this system. Yesterday a group gathered at the legation on Massachusetts avenue for tea in the spacious drawing room.

The legation was filled with flowers which had been sent all the way from South Africa. In the drawing room were vases of "fire berries," small, red flowers, which last indefinitely. The dining room table, paneled in South African wood, was centered with a bowl of white blossoms from that country which grow without leaves and look very much like our arbutus. Mrs. Close arranges all her flowers herself, and does so most artistically. Mrs. Close does all the floral arrangements herself, and most artistically.

Yesterday the hostess wore a long black gown with a lace jacket, and a string of pearls. The minister was alos present. Tea was poured by Mrs. Willem Naude, wife of the attache of the legation, who wore a rust-colored frock with a pleated bodice. Mrs. Johan Siegruhn, whose husband recently arrived to sreve as attache of the legaiton, was also present.

South African Wine Feature of Party

The Closes like to feature South African products at their parti:, and yesterday offffered some wine from that country. In addition, there were plates of dainty mushroom and caviar sandwiches and cakes and cookies galore.

The legation, one of the newest in Washington, is also one of the most spacious and attractive. The two drawing rooms open one into the other, have walls painted white and drapereis of red brocade. The whole effect is fresh and cheery.

Among those who called yesterday afternoon was Mme. Molekamp, wife of the Commercial Commercial Counselor of The Netherlands Legation. She and her husband wil lentertain at dinner on Wednesday evening in honor of the Minitser and Mme. Loudon. Mme. Molekamp was accompanied by Mme. Woodfin Branliere, of Paris, who has taken an apartment at the Anchorage.

Mrs. Arth r H. Tirrell was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, who wore a black coat, fur collared, and a small hat of sapphire-blue velvet. Miss Tierrell designs many of her chapeaux.

Mme. Van Troostenburg de Bruyn, also in black, was another present from the Diplomatic Corps. Others who called to pay their respects were Mrs. Charles Baker, Mrs. William Lacy, who topped off her frock with a silver cape; Forrester Davidson and several others.

Corby Wedding In Belgrade

Of wide interest to Washington society is the news from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, of the engagement of Miss Muriel Eleanor Corby, daughter of Mrs. William Stephen Corby, to Frederick Granville Dudley-Ryder, of London.

Mrs. Corby and Miss Corby are now in Belgrade visiting Mrs. Ivan Franges, the former Miss Justine Corby, and Dr. Franges, who was with the Yugoslav Legation here before being sent to the foreign office in the Yugoslav capital.

The wedding of Miss Corby to Mr. Dudley-Ryder is expected to take place soon. Mrs. Virginia Corby Thompson, a cousin of the future bride, has arrived from London to be present at the ceremony.

After a wedding trip through Italy and France, the couple will reside in London. With Dr. and Mrs. Franges, they hope to visit Mrs. Corby here in the spring at her home on Chevy Chey Circle.

The marriage of Dr. and Mrs. Franges took place a year or so ago in Washington. Miss Corby has been visiting them for several months, and since their marriage has spent much of her time in Europe.

Mrs. Williams to Fete Mme. Georgi After Ballet Tomorrow

Mrs. John R. Williams will give a buffet supper for Mme. Yvonne Georgi following Mme. Georgi's appearance here tomorrow night at the National Theater with members of her ballet. The performance is sponsored by the Thrift Shop, which Mrs. Williams heads.

The newly arrived Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon will occupy a box at the theater torow evening, and will have with them the Secretary of the Legation and Mrs. A. F. H. van Troostenburg de Bryn. The Counselor and Countess van Rechteren-Limpurg will be guests of Mrs. Williams in her box. The Naval Attache and Mme. Ranneft will be others from the Netherlands legation at the performance.

Mary Goetchius Betrothal Revealed

The engagement of Miss Mary T. Goetchius, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Goetchius, of Smithtown, Long Island, to Charles D. Plumb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Plumb, of East Norwich, Long Island, has been announced.

The bride-elect attended Brearley School and was graduated from the Oldfields School in Glencoe, Md. During her study there, she visited in Washington frequently and has a number of friends here.

Miss Goetchius made her debut at a dinner dance given by her parents, and is a subscriber to the Meadowbrook Hunt. Her fiance was graduated from Friends Academy in Locust Valley, Long Island, and attended Cornell University, where he was a member of Omega Tau Sigma.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosenberg Living With Taylors

Mrs. and Mrs. Fred Rosenberg, who were married last September 27, are making their home with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor, of Washington.

On New Year's Day they went through a Jewish ceremony at the home of Samuel Rosenberg, father of the bridegroom. A reception at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor followed.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

CHAMPAGNE SALESMEN, dressmakers and ex-speakeasy owners make up the "not-very-holy" trio which today directs the destiny of society" according to Elsa Maxwell, who in the current issue of a National magazine writes the first of a series of articles on doings of the elite.

"Harry Lehr ave society its orders in the early 1900's" says Miss Maxwell, tracing the role representatives of the great firms have played. "George Kessler entertained it at his mammoth parties in 1910. Von Ribbentrop, present Forein Minister of the Third Reich, but then still a mere champagne agent, directed society from London in the early 1930's. And Prince Serge Obolensky, an exiled Russian nobleman, the managing director of a fashionable night club and a wine agent extraordinary, is presiding over it now."

THE LEADING COUTURIERS of the day often make or break social careers, says Miss Maxwell, citing the case of Mrs. Harrison Williams. "Just another name ten years ago, (she) is today probably the best known woman in American society, not because she exercises any real influence as, let us say, Mrs. Belmont did, and not because of her family tree, but because of the fact that being able to pay as much as $750 for a cocktail jacket she is naturally the Great God Brown of all dressmakers."

After dark, a handful of one-time speakeasy proprietors guide the activities of New York socialites, Miss Maxwell states positively. "From midnight on," she says, "the life of New York society is being led for the benefit of several owners of former speakeasies who preside over three famous places where everybody who is anybody makes it a point to be seen as often as possible. Taxes being what they are, it is not surprising that the fifth generation of Vanderbilts should prefer a five-room apartment in a Park avenue hotel to an 80-room mansion on Fifth avenue, or that the third generation of Whitneys should entertain their friends in a former speakeasy.

PRESENT-DAY HOSTESSES are les sconcerned with men and women who belong to the right clubs than with inviting the "amusing" people, and the ability of mixing people, models and debutantes, radio comedians and playboys, as the "real foundation of what is known as society today," says La Maxwell.

While a social climber's best chance of succeeding in New York today is to be an amusing person, she continues, the British are so used to bores that heavy contributions to favorite charities are the leading entree in stodgy London. Generosity with cash also opens exalted doors in hard-pressed Paris, according to this fromer vaudeville performer, who now cracks the social whip on two continents.

TO LEAVE society in general for society in Washington, the last meeting of the first series of Friday Supper Club dances took place last night at the usual stand, the Sulgrave Club. The place was packed to the doors, and the party was preceded by a half a dozen dinners.

One of the largest groups was at the enormous table reserved by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, who entertained 40 young people at dinner beforehand for her daughter, Evalyn. The latter abandoned her usual black last night for floating white tulle, very jeune fille in style. Her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, were also present, as was the later's sister, Eleanor Meem, also in white.

Debutantes Agner Magruder and Maisie Howard were honored at a dinner party given by Alice Barry, later all going on to the Sulgrave. Diana Rowland, another hostess, wore black velvet, draped over the shoulders. The same material was chosen by Elsie Ekengren, whose dress had a hoop skirt and no straps.

Oscar Johnsons Staying at Raleigh

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnston have arrived in Washington from their plantation in Mississippi and are staying at the Raleigh Hotel.

Also at the Raleigh is Roy Miller, of Corpus Christi, Tex., who will be in Washington for several weeks. He will be joined in a few days by Mrs. Miller. The Millers have an extensive circle of friends in the Coingressional set.

Attend Assembly

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman went to Baltimore last evening to attend the annual Baltimore Assembly. They stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Cotten.

Reeds Guests Of Stanleys At Mayflower

Many From Out-of-Town Attend Reception And Dinner Here

Justice and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed were guests of honor last evening at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley at the Mayflower Hotel.

The host and hostess received in the Pan-American room, taking their company of 50 to the Chinese room, where dinner was served. Guests sat at a long table, which was decorated with low bowls of jonquils, iris, gladioli, heather and stevia.

Among the out-of-town guests were Representative and Mrs. William B. Byron, of Maryland; Gen. and Mrs. Edward Rose and Jacqueline Rose, of Harburton, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schroth, of Scranton, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Hope Barroll, jr., and Raymond S. Williams, of Baltimore; B. E. Hutchinson, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. George Whiteside, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Kelly and Mr and Mrs. Edward Reynolds, of New York, and Henry Suydam, of Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley recently closed their country place in Laurel, Md., and are at the Maykower for the season.

Parties to Honor Two Diplomats Ordered to Rome

A number of parties are being planned in honor of diplomats who are about to depart for other posts.

Prince del Drago, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, who will leave shortly for Rome, where he has bene assigned to the Foreign Office, will be honored at a dinner Monday by the Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti. He was recently feted at a dinner given by the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz.

The Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Charles Lucet will give a buffet supper Wednesday evening as a farewell to the Second Secretary, Armand Berard, who will also go to Rome for duty. He will leave January 14.

Mrs. Keyes At Christening

Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, who left Washington Thursday for Boston, attended the christening yesterday of her grandson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Keyes. The ceremony took place at the Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill, Mass., the church in which the child's parents were married.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Keyes make their home a Simsbury, Conn., where Mr. Keyes is on the faculty of the Westminister School. He and Mrs. Keyes, the former Miss Louise McNeil, have been visiting her parents at their home near Boston for the holidays and for the christening.

The baby was named Peter Bowen Keyes. His father, though named Francis, was always called Peter as a nickname and the family decided to give that name to the baby.

Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, famous also as Frances Perkinson Keyes, the authoress, made Boston the first stop in a lecture tour which will take her through the Midwest. She will speak before the Nineteenth Century Club at Chicago and while there will stop with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gates Dawes, old friends, from the days when Mr. Dawes was Vice President and the late Senator Keyes was in the Senate.

She will also speak at Detroit and at Fond-du-Lac, Wis., before returning to Washington January 15. At Detroit Mrs. Keyes will be the house guest of Mrs. Joseph J. Cheatham at the home of Mrs. Cheatham's mother. Mrs. Cheatham is the wife of Admiral Cheatham and makes her home in Washington.

Patton Heads Show Workers

Col. George S. Patton, jr., the new commandant at Fort Myer, has been appointed chairman of the committee for the President's Birthday Horseshow, which will be held again this year at the Fort Myer Riding Hall on the evenings of January 25 and 26.

This will be the first of a series of celebrations of the President's brithday which are held annually to create funds for the campaign against infantile pralysis.

Lieut. Col. W. C. Crane, commanding the Artillery at Fort Myer, has been appointed vice chairman. The following prominent horsemen and horsewomen in Washington and vicinity, are members of the committee in charge: H. Rozier Dulany, jr., Melvin C. Hazen, Dr. William McClellan, Thomas P. On the program with Miss Bustabo will be Ernest Schelling, noted pianist and conductor, who also will be here tomorrow to be a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss.

The musicale promises to be unusually interesting. Miss Bustabo recently completed a tour of Australia, where her programs were highly successful. She will play her famous Stradivarius violin Monday.

New Yorkers Here En Route to Florida

Mrs. L. E. Kennedy and Miss R. M. Kennedy, of New York City, are in Washington for a few days on the way to Florida and are staying at the Raleigh.

Another couple en route to Florida, also at that hotel, are Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Whidden, of Boston. They will spend several days here.

Cabinet Folk Now Enjoying Breathing Spell

Practically No Parties On Immediate Schedule In Post-Holiday Lull

In the aftermath of the holiday rush, Cabinet families are taking advantage of a breathing spell before the Congressional season.

With the exception of "at homes," practically no entertaining is on the Cabinet calendar for the immediate future. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull are still away, and the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau expect to stay in Florida another week or ten days.

Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, busy with their moving from the S street home to the Shoreham, have no entertaining planned for quite some time.

The newly appointed Attorney General Frank Murphy left Washington yesterday for Detroit, where he will speak tonight at the Jackson Day dinner in that city. He will return the first of next week.

Postmaster General Farley, who usually spends every week-end in New York with Mrs. Farley, will delay his departure until after the Jackson Day dinner at the Mayflower tonight, where he will introduce the President at the dinner and over the radio. Following the dinner he will take a late train for New York and will return the first of the week.

Those Cabinet members remaining in the city over the week-end will, of course, attend the Jackson Day dinner.

Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace will entertain at dinner Wednesday in honor of the recently retired Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings.

Races at Hialeah Draw Celebritias From Washington

Socially prominent racin enthusiasts are flocking to Miami to attend the opening of Hialeah Park, generally considered the country's most beautiful race track. Joseph Widener, president of the Miami Jockey Club, will entertain a large party. He will be assisted by his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, 3d. Miss Mable Vernon, of Washington, has arrived at the Columbus Hotel for a short visit.

Stopping at the Everglades are these visitors from the National Capital: Mrs. G. F. Glover, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Eilson, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Zane, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Vaught, Mr. and Mrs. Selig Brez, Edward Whitehead and Paul L. Williams. Mrs. William A. Owen, of Washington, is a guest at the Miami Colonial.

28 Congressmen Live at the Roosevelt

Among the 28 members of Congress who have chosen the Hotel Roosevelt as their residence for the session are Delegate and Mrs. Samuel Wilder King, of Hawaii; Representative Clyde Williams, of Missouri; Representative Leslie C. Arends, of Illinois; Representative and Mrs. George W. Gillie, of Indiana; the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee and Mrs. Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado; Representative and Mrs. Robert A. Grant, of Michigan, and Representative and Mrs. Pat Cannon, of Florida.

Also Representative and Mrs. Brent Spence, of Kentucky; Representative and Mrs. Noble Johnson, of Terre Haute, Indiana; Representative and Mrs. Harry Engelbright, of California; Representative and Mrs. William W. Blackney, of Michigan; Representative and Mrs. Jack Houston, of Kansas; Representative and Mrs. Thomas Ford, of California; Representative Daniel A. Reed, of New York; Representative and Mrs. C. W. Turner, of Tennessee; Representative and Mrs. H. E. Claypool, of Ohio; Representative and Mrs. Orville Zimmerman, of Missouri; Representative and Mrs. A. J. May, of Kentucky; Representative and Mrs. R. J. Welch, of California; Representative Pehr Holmes, of Massachusetts, and Representative nad Mrs. Carl Curtis, of Nebraska.

Fete for Mrs. Cummings

Mrs. Harry W. Blair will entertain at luncheon on Monday in compliment to Mrs. Homer S. Cummings. The party will take place in Mrs. Blair's home in Alexandria.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

NUMBERS OF PERSONS who have planned to leave the hunt country for the South continue to stay on as the days are mild, and the foxhunting of the best. However, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haserick will soon be off to Vero Beach, Fla., where they will spend two months; and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Bearns will leave for Palm Beach next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henri de Heller and their son, Jimmy de Heller, will leave Warrenton early next week for New York where they will sail January 14 on the Rex for Egypt. They have a houseboat on the Nile and will not return to the United States before April.

THERE IS MUCH interest being shown in the fact that Goodstone, a house near Middleburg, built about 20 years ago by Walter Goodwin, of Hartford, Conn., has been sold to Mrs. M. A. Taylor, of Toronto, Canada. Mrs. Goodwin will turn the place over about January 12 to Mrs. Taylor, who will move in with her three children. The Taylors spent last year in Charlottesville.

Goodstone comprises many acres and the house, built on a hill, on the bank of Goose Creek, has a beautiful view of the surrounding country.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Prince, jr., yesterday entertained a number of the younger set at a skeet shooting party at their home near Marshall. Among those competing was David Scheson, of Washington, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baird at Glen Welby this week before returning to Groton School. Other good shots present were Charles Baird, jr., Woodward Redmond, Tom Redmond, Jack Butler, Bob McConnell, jr., Dick McConnell and Oliver Filley, jr. Woodward Redmond had the highest score.

MR. AND MRS. Oliver Iselin gave a dinner party last evening in honor of their daughter, Miss Barbara Iselin. Miss Iselin will return to Foxcroft School today.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Hardin have returned to their home, Newstead near Upperville after a visit of en days to Mr. Hardin's mother, Mrs. B. L. Hardin in Washington. They also were guests of Mrs. Taylor Hardin's mother, Mrs. Walter Bliss at Far Hills, N. J. The Hardins will hunt with Piedmont Hounds today.

COUNT POTOCKI, who motored out from Washington on Wednesday to hunt with Piedmont Fox Hounds, also hunted with that pack again yesterday. He wore the uniform of his hunt in Poland and rode the Chief, a horse from Mrs. John Hay Whitney's stable. Mrs. Robert Winmill and Miss Jane Wilbur, of Warrenton, were also in the field.

Among those at the meet were the Misses Connie, Mary Owen and Betty Lyon, of Purcellville. Miss Betty Lyon returns to the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Noroton, Conn., on Monday to resume her studies.

Congressional Club Honors Newcomers

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Wives of new members of Congress were guests yesterday at the tea given annually in their honor by the Congressional Club, at the clubhouse, New Hampshire avenue and U street northwest. The affair was also the last social event at which the retiring executive board will receive. The election of new officers is scheduled for January 18.

Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, retiring president, headed the receiving line, in which were also Mrs. S. Otis Bland, of Virginia; Mrs. Harry Englebright, of California; Mrs. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi; Mrs. Joe L. Smith, of West Virginia, and Mrs. William H. Larrabee, of Indiana, vice presidents; Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Missouri, recording secretary; Mrs. Karl Stefan, Nebraska, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Maine, treasurer.

Bouquets of white chrysanthemums and red gladioli decorated the lower rooms of the clubhouse, and on the tea table on the second floor was a bowl of pink snapdragons and carnations. Alternating pouring were Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, Mrs. George W. Norris, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, Mrs. Richard J. Welch, Mrs. Cassius C. Dowell and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff. Mrs. Elmer C. Leatherwood was in charge of arrangements for the tea.

Many New Members Are Welcomed

Among new members of the Congressional group who were welcomed were Mrs. Robert Taft, wife of Senator Taft, of Ohio; Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of Senator Clark, of Idaho; Mrs. Chester Bolton, of Ohio; Mrs. William Hess, of Ohio; Mrs. John Alexander, of Minnesota, who was there with Mrs. Lundeen; Mrs. William D. Byron, of Maryland; Mrs. Harry Routzohn, Mrs. John Vorys and Mrs. Lycurgus L. Marshall, of Ohio.

Mrs. Englebright had with her the wives of three new members of Congress from California, Mrs. William Carl Hinshaw, of Los Angeles; Mrs. John Anderson, of San Jose, and Mrs. Thomas M. Eaton, of Long Beach. She also had as a guest her sister-in-law, Mrs. William H. Englebright, of Toronto, Canada, who, with her husband and son, is here for a short visit.

Representative Jessie Sumner, of Illinois, newly elected to the House, attended the tea with Mrs. Ralph Church, who has been program chairman for the club for the past season. Mrs. Joseph Byrns, jr., of Tennessee, daughter-in-law of the late former Speaker of the House, was among those who arrived toward the end of the afternoon.

Familiar Faces Among New Ones

There were many familiar faces as well as new ones in the company. Among members of former years were Mrs. William Whittington, of Mississippi, president of the club preceding Mrs. Reed; Mrs. Bruce Barton, of New York; Miss Vivian Vestal and Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., associate members; Mrs. Jerry O'Connell, of Montana, and Mrs. Lyle Boren, of Oklahoma, who were there together and were brides of last season; Mrs. Pete Jarman, of Alabama, who was accompanied by Mrs. George Grant, the wife of a new member of the House from that State; Mrs. R. F. Rich and Mrs. Donald McLean.

Mrs. James J. Davis had as guests Mrs. George Trowbridge and her daughter, Miss Dorothy Trowbridge, of California.

Mrs. Henry C. Luckey, of Nebraska, had with her a Japanese girl, Miss Fusa Yamashita, daughter of Y. Bryan Yamashita, who is in this country to pay a memorial tribute to the late William Jennings Bryan. Miss Yamashita's father lived in the Bryan home for six years while he was studying at the University of Nebraska. He is here now in observance of the Japanese custom of paying tribute to anyone deceased on the thirteenth anniversary of his death. Miss Yamashita wore her native costume, including sandals.

Ruth Shoemaker Addresses Club

Proposed legislation for the State of Maryland in 1939 was discussed before the Civic Section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday morning by Miss Ruth Shoemaker, newly-elected member of the House of Delegates.

Relief will be an important matter before the session, as will the bill giving women the right to serve on juries, Miss Shoemaker asserted. The jury service bill is one in which the women of Maryland are vitally interested.

Miss Shoemaker also discussed changes which may be made in the tax laws and the proposed change in the police system designed to relieve the county police of the responsibility for highway patrol and thus leave a larger force for the residential sections. The Chevy Chase women have been urging an increase in the police force in their community. State police would be assigned to road patrol under the proposal she outlined.

Other measures likely to be introduced, which she discussed were those providing for the abolition of the justice of the peace system and the replacing of alms houses with district hospitals. She expressed confidence that the Bethesda Public Library would be approved at this session.

Following her talk, Raymond Gingell, manager of one of the neighborhood theaters, discussed the children's motion picture programs which have been inaugurated in cooperation with the Motion Picture Council.

Mrs. William F. Henry presided at the meeting in the absence of Mrs. Edward H. Helmuth, section chairman, who is in Florida. Mrs. W. L. New was in charge of the luncheon which followed the program.

Pi Beta Phi Sorority to Meet Tuesday

Pi Beta Phi Sorority will meet Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Samuel Spruce, Gamma Province vice president, 4309 Van Ness street, for a program devoted to "D. C. Alpha Chapter History by Those Who Made It."

Members of the chapter will review its 50 years and discuss plans for the province conference to be held at the Washington Hotel here April 28 and 29.

The ninth edition of the "Pi Beta Phi Directory" has just been published with the names listed by chapters, alphabetically and in geographical sections, both here and abroad.

Of the 31,161 members the sorority has initiated, there are 29,325 in good standing, a total of 2,293 in college chapters and the balance in the 190 alumnae clubs. The Washington club now has 615 members.

Kensington Club Hears Attorney

Wilson L. Townsend, Washington attorney and prominent in Montgomery County, spoke on "County Government" at the Woman's Club of Kensington yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John T. Williams.

Mr. Townsend, who was a candidate for the office of judge in the recent election in Montgomery, gave the history of forms of county government and described the functions of a county manager.

Mrs. James E. Lamb, president of the club, paid tribute to the late Miss Annie M. Wilson, who had been hostess for the December meeting of the club. A committee was appointed to prepare a memorial which will be sent to her niece, Miss Eleanor Borden, in Philadelphia, at whose home she died December 23. Mrs. George Landick read also a tribute to Miss Wilson written by Mrs. Irwin Linton ten years ago.

Mrs. Richard Wiebe reported on the Christmas party given in the Gengar School for colored children. Announcement was made of a gift of money for the purchase of reference books and a motion picture screen for use in the new Kinsington Junior High School.

State Merger Plan Backed By O'Conor

Bowman Proposal To Abolish 10 Md. Agencies, Create 5 New Ones Lauded

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 6—The Bowman Commission reorganization report eliminating ten State departments and creating five new ones was given full approval today by Gov.-elect Herbert R. O'Conor.

"I intend to stand by the report. It is splendid work," he said.

Appointed two months ago by Mr. O'Conor shortly after his election, the committee completed its work yesterday. Dr. Isiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, was chairman.

Besides abolition and creation of state departments, the report suggested the merger of others.

No mention was made of minority appointments by the Governor to the various boards and commissions. Provisions are made by many State laws for the Governor to appoint a majority of members of certain boards from his own political party, but to have opposing party members on the boards also.

One member of the commission explained:

"Our feeling was that minority representation is not only the bunk as far as tending to impartial administration concerned, but that there can be cases where it is actually crooked.

"Looking over minority appointments we found that the appointees are in many cases merely members of the minority they are supposed to represent and are actually closely associated with the appointing authorities.

"There are reasons to believe that this state of affairs is generally recognized and that these minority appointees go into office with confidence in them consequently impaired because nobody trusts them."

Endorsement of the reorganization plan was given also by Thomas E. Conlon, speaker of the House of Delegates.

$26,000,000 To Be Asked For Md. Roads

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 6.—Appropriations of $26,000,000 will be sought by the State Roads Commission for 1940-1941, its officials indicated today.

This does not include expenditures in Baltimore City but Federal funds now available to the commission, totaling $2,800,000, are included in the budget.

The budget for the next two years, which is an increase over the last biennium of more than $8,000,000, was discussed today by commission members and the State Budget Board. The budget for 1938 and 1939 was $17,532,861.

Hooper S. Miles, State treasurer and a member of the budget group, after the meeting today, said several reductions were made from the original budget estimates submitted by the roads commission.

Details of the budget are expected to be released next week, Beall said.

Two-Day Riot Quelled at Md. Girls' School

3 Leaders in Cell After Reign of Terror at Glen Burnie

By the Associated Press.

Glen Burnie, Md., Jan. 6—Three inmates cooled their heels today in a detention cell of the Maryland Trhining School for Colored Girls after leading a siege of terror which lasted two days.

The trouble broke out Wednesday night when two of the girls routed 40 others from a west end dormitory and then systematically demolished beds, springs, mattresses and other furnishings, Supt. Sadie George said.

The two girls, who for a time were joined by five more, barricaded the third floor dormitories and flooded the floors by opening spigots in bathrooms. Before much damage was done the water supply was turend off.

When officials attempted to quel the riot they were pelted with water-soaked sheets and other missiles.

Picture 'Coverage' of Roosevelt Taxes Cameraman's Ingenuity

Proper Background That Tells Story Needed, White House News Photographer Tells Shutter-Lifters at Va. Conference

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 6.—Difficulties in "covering" President Roosevelt photographically were described to the first Virginia news photography conference today by George Skadding, Associated Press photographer assigned to the White House.

Skadding said it was an easy matter to obtain routine shots of the President on his frequent journeys, but that it required ingenuity to photograph the Executive against a background which would tell the complete story of where he was and what he was doing.

The speaker said that criterion was applied in evaluating local pictures in papers submitted to the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press for criticism. He deplored the lack of background that would tell the complete story about the subject.

Sees Color Increase

Jack Price, veteran New York photographer, predicted today that color photography would increase rapidly in newspapers, particularly in view of the development of a new film, placed on the market for the first time this month, which is four times faster than the old type color film. The old film, he said, was too slow for action pictures.

Hugh Miller, Washington Post roto editor, said The Post gained lineage and circulation by concentrating on layouts of local pictures in the roto sections. He exhibited pages from The Post roto section to illustrate the technique used.

Arthur Ellis, Washington Post staff photographer, drew upon his experiences in advising how to obtain good human interest pictures for use during the intervals when "spot" news or sensational pictures were lacking.

W. C. Eckenberg, New York Times photographer, emphasized the superiority of the self-controlled photographer over the undisciplined in emergencies and urged the cameramen to gain confidence through constant practice. He listed numerous instances where alertness produced great news pictures. He described the Hindenburg disaster as the greatest example of courage and resourcefulness of the cameraman.

Prizes Announced

Roy E. Stryker, chief of the historical division of the Farm Security Administration, said the Government was deeply interested in photography as a documentary and informational agency, but that it was not a competitor in news pictures.

Delk Simpson, of the Newport News Daily Press and Times-Herald, won the $15 first prize in the contest among photographers on Virginia dailies with "Hot News," a vivid shot of a wrecked automobile aflame at night.

"Suicide," a picture of a boatman taking a body from the water, won the $15 first prize among pictures appearing in Virginia weeklies.

Democracy Still Reigns in U.S., Says Jewish Leader

President Roosevelt's selection of Felix Frankfurter, a Jew, and Frank Murphy, a Catholic, to high official positions is the best indication that America still has a true democracy, said Edward Rosenblum, executive director of the Jewish Community Center, last night at Beth Sholom Synagogue.

Characterizing Roosevent's recent message to Congress as "an expression of the real sentiments of a tolerant people," Rosenblum told his hearers that "we are fortunate that in America there is no division of thought on such matters as the persecution of minorities."

Contrasting conditions in Germany with America, Rosenblum said that "the Bill of Rights is the new Bible the world should adhere to, and should be added to the Old and New Testaments."

Epiphany Feast Celebrated by Episcopalians

Episcopal churches throughout Washington yesterday marked the Feast of the Epiphany, with services of holy communion as a feature.

At Epiphany Church, 1317 G street, one of the principal seats of observance, Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, the rector and Chaplain of the Senate, was celebrant at the 11 a. m. rites, while the Rev. Duncan Fraser, assistant rector, conducted an earlier service.

The Washington Cathedral took note of the occasion at its daily services of holy communion at 7:30 a. m., with Canon Anson Phelps Stokes presiding, and at the evensong rites, conducted by Canon Precentor William Bradner.

St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, where President Roosevelt worships, and other church of the denomination celebrated the Feast Day with special services.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 6.—During the past six years, more than $250,000 has been paid Frederick County farmers who have participated in the wheat adjustment and farm conservation program, according to the annual report of I. Fred Stine, county agent.

Net payments to the farmers have totaled $256,693.03, while the gross amount is $275,359.74. Administrative expenses for the six-year period total $18,666.71, or 7.2 per cent of the total.

Annapolis Assumes Festive Air For Inauguration of O'Conor

Staid Capital Dressed Up With Bunting And Banners; Parade Will Follow The Swearing In Next Wednesday

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Jan. 6.—This staid colonial capital is going definitely gay for the Wednesday inaugural of Herbert R. O'Conor, sixtieth Governor of Maryland.

The city assumed a festive appearance as decorating crews placed bunting and banners on the principal streets. Holiday lighting equipment erected before the holidays still remained in place.

Frederick R. Huber, inaugural director, was here today for a final check on plans for the observance. Feature of the inaugural will be a parade which its sponsors claim will be the biggest in Annapolis history.

Representatives of more than 100 civic and political clubs will march in the parade. Delegations from each county in the State have also reserved places.

The official observance will open at 11 a. m. when the Naval Academy Band starts a 50-minute concert on the Statehouse lawn. Governor-elect O'Conor will take the oath of office in the Senate chamber at noon. Senators and judges of the Court of Appeals will be present.

After he is sworn in, Gov. O'Conor will deliver his inaugural address from the Statehouse portico. It will be the first time in many years that a new Governor has made his inaugural speech in the open air. Loudspeakers have been placed along the parade route so spectators can hear his initial speech.

Gov. O'Conor will review the parade in his honor from the porch of the Elks Club on State Circle.

Huber estimated more than 10,000 will be in the line of march, including the Naval Militia, National Guard and the civilian organizations.

State police and the Baltimore police department are sending extra men to Annapolis to aid local officers in handling the expected influx of traffic.

Board Allots $2,416,985 to Md. Needy

Counties' Share for 3-Months Set at $849,485

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 6.—Maryland's needy—the aged, dependent children, the blind and unemployables—will receive $2,416,985 in the next three months, the Board of State Aid and Charities announced today.

The budget allocated $685,740 for direct relief to those unable to work, $946,621 for old age pensions, $741,193 to aid children and $43,430 for blind persons without private means.

Samuel E. Shannahan, board chairman, announced Federal funds totaling $735,578 and State funds of $766,831 have been set aside for the quarter from January 1 to March 31. Local communities must provide $914,576 of which $685,740 is for direct relief to unemployables.

Baltimore City's share of aid was $1,567,500.

The distribution to the counties for all forms of aid was: Allegany, $95,415; Anne Arundel, $46,105; Baltimore, $79,547; Calvert, $9,422; Caroline, $20,172; Carroll, $20,675; Cecil, $29,286; Charles, $16,147; Dorchester, $34,583.

Frederick, $51,936; Garrett, $30,522; Harford, $19,890; Howard, $15,804; Kent, $12,955; Montgomery, $44,891; Prince Georges, $53,557; Queen Anne's, $14,987; St. Mary's, $14,678; Somerset, $35,536; Talbot, $17,724; Washington, 97,211; Wicomico, $60,249; Worcester, $28,184.

Readers Furnish Home, Cash And Food for Sick Taximan

War Veteran, 43, and Family Facing Eviction in Alexandria, Receive $60, 5 Baskets of Supplies and 2 Months' Rent

A new home, an ample food supply and a substantial cash reserve were made possible for George Russell and his family yesterday by the generous response of Post readers who learned of his destitute circumstances in Alexandria, Va.

Russell, 43-year-old World War veteran, who drives a taxi in Washington, faced the loss of his home and had no way in which to feed his wife and five youngsters until a fellow cab driver told The Post of his plight.

Yesterday, following a story in The Post, Russell and his brood were assured of at least temporary relief. A total of $60 was received—one woman advancing two months' rent on a house Russell had found in Southwest Washington.

Benefactors Thanked

In all cases, the donors asked to remain anonymous. Included in gifts to the Russell family were five baskets of food—from ready-cooked hams to eggs, milk and fresh vegetables.

Standing in the barren, unheated living room of his Alexandria home yesterday while three of his children huddled together in a big chair, Russell said he wanted to offer his "grateful thanks" to those who came to his aid.

His wife, he apologized, "wasn't feeling well," and had gone to bed to keep warm. He led the way down a dark hallway into the kitchen and smiled as he pointed to the baskets of food.

Kids to Get Real Meal

"That's the most food we ever had at one time," he said. "It sure is wonderful to know we won't have to go hungry any longer. Now I can really give the kids a square meal."

When he was told to move—the Alexandria landlord has ordered the family to vacate so the house may be renovated—Russell began looking for new quarters. He found a small house 503 Eighth street southwest which rents for $22.50 a month. Cash donations from Post readers will permit him to move.

But Russell isn't well. It is all he can do to drive his cab the few hours he is able to work.

"I want to get my family settled and then go to Mount Alto Hospital for treatment," he said yesterday. "If I can only get well, I can support them."

Infant Death Rate Here at Record Low

48 Fatalities Per Thousand Live Births Set All-Time Mark; Officials Are Pleased

The District established an all-time record low in infant mortality rates during 1938, the Health Department reported yesterday.

Average infant deaths for the year was 48 per 1,000, as compared with 72 in each 1,000 live births in 1936 and 60 in 1937.

Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare, extremely pleased over last year's record, said:

"If we accept the dictum that infant mortality is the most sensitive index we possess of social welfare, the citizens of the District have cause for gratification."

6,000 Registered at Clinics

Dr. Oppenheimer said a reduction had also occurred during the hazardous and difficult first month of life. Here the mortality declined from 40 per 1,000 live births in 1936 to 31 in 1938. Both the white and colored population have benefited in this saving of infant lives, she said.

The mortality of the white infants has dropped from 49 in 1936 to 37 in 1938, Dr. Oppenheimer said. The mortality of colored infants has shown an even more marked decline—from 120 in 1936 to 71 last year, she said.

"There are at the present 15 centers for maternal and child health services under the health department, with six of them strategically located in school buildings," she stated.

At present there are more than 6,000 babies and 7,000 preschool children registered at these centers, she said.

Stresses Needless Deaths

"In areas of economic need the increase in attendance has been so great and the number of clinic sessions has had to be increased to such an extent that further expansion, particularly of educational work, which is so basically important, is impossible without additional space, not to mention personnel," she said.

Too many babies still die needlessly from prematurity because public facilities for the care of the premature are inadequate, she said.

BILLY CONN BEATS APOSTOLI IN UPSET

Gains Shot At 175-lb. Title Bout

9,000 See New Fistic Star Win Narrow Decision After 10 Sizzling Rounds

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 6.—A new fistic star was born tonight amidst thundering cheers in Madison Square Garden as Hhandsome Billy Conn, of Pittsburgh, won the decision over Fred Apostoli, the half-crowned middleweight champion, after ten rounds of sensational fighting.

Conn, a throw-back to the Irish warriors of another ring era, won the decision over the Apostoli by a narrow margin after treating the 9,000 fans to one of the grandest displays of ringcraft ever seen in the Garden.

By his upset victory Conn virtually clinched a shot at the light-heavy-heavyweight title soon. The tall, brown-haired Pittsburgh Puma is a lgiht-heavyweight now. He scaled 7¾ pounds over the middleweight 160-pound limit tonight. Apostoli, recognized as middleweight champion in New York State, weighed 160½.

Conn, the 13-5 underdog in the betting in his New York debut, staged the first major upset of the 1939 boxing season as he outjabbed and outsmarted Apostoli, the San Francisco battling bell boy who had triumphed with ease over the cream of the 160-pound crop.

Tippy Larkin, hard-hitting youngster from Garfield, N. J., won the lightweight championship of the State of New Jersey by scoring a technical knockout over Irish Billy Beauhold, of Jersey City, in 43 seconds of the tenth and final round.

Joe Bologna, 147, Jersey City, took the four-round decision in the opening preliminary after a hard fight with Joey Spangler, 147¾, Richmond, Va. Spangler took a nine count in the second round but rallied.

Tommy Houston, 145¼, Brooklyn, won a four-round decision over Mickey Donohue, 144, Stamford, Conn. About 8,000 fans were in the garden at this time.

Returning Duke Squad Greeted By 10,000 Fans

Durham, N. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—Heroes even in defeat, Duke's Blue Devils, whose perfect record was marred by Southern California in the Rose Bowl, returned home late today to receive a magnificent welcome.

A crowd estimated at 10,000 crowded about the railroad station as the "Blue Devil Special" rolled in from Pasadena, Calif. Thousands of others lined the street a dozen deep on each side for 10 blocks as the Dukes were paraded to the campus.

Coach Wallace Wade said the demonstration was the greatest any of his teams had ever received on its return from the Rose Bowl.

Snead Trailing Los Angeles Open

Los Angeles, Jan. 6 (AP).—Equaling the course record, Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex., jumped into the forefront of the turning professional stars today when he shot a 66 over the Harding course in the first round of the fourteenth annual Los Angeles open golf tournament.

Demaret took a two-stroke lead over Abe Espinosa, Harold McSpaden and Mark Fry as a total of 245 professional and amateur linksmen toured the par 72 Harding Course and the par 71 Wilson Course of the far-flung Griffith Park accommodations.

Horton Smith, Chicago star, who has been off his game for some time, came back with a subpar 69, while Sam Snead, the West Virginia hill billy, trailed in the field with a 73. Snead teed off with his throat swathed in flannels, having contracted a cold.

Washington, Va., Splits With Warrenton Fives

Boys and girls teams of Warrenton, Va., traveled to Washington, Va., last night and were able to split even in games with teams of that city. The Warrenton girls dropped a 28-24 game to Washington, while Warrenton beat out Washington boys, 23-22, in an overtime session.

Central, Hancock Split

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 6.—Central and Hancock High basketball teams broke even in a doubleheader here, the local sextet walloping the Washington Countians, 37-3, and the visiting boys nosing out of the Orange and Black quintet, 21-20, with a last-period rally.

Pet Planks of C. U. Track Coach May Add 10 Points Per Meet

Dorsey Griffith Mighty Proud Of His New Boards as Vanguard Of Team Starts Limbering Up

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Dorsey Griffith, the genial gentleman whose hobbies are collecting antiques and coaching Catholic University's trackmen, was standing on the gray, weatherbeaten track at Brookland yesterday, stopwatch in hand, indulging in the latter. There have been years when Dorsey would have preferred racing antiques instead, but this year it is different.

A slim, earnest youth, clad in pajama-like training suit, was circling the over at a smooth, even stride when we arrived. He went around so many times we got dizzy watching, and everytime he passed Griffith the coach peared intently at his alarm clock, hastily scribbled in a fat notebook, and yelled instructions and encouragement.

"nly six more laps—time's good—keep your arms up. Only three more times—you're beating last week's trial. Once more—it's your best time yet—go al the way in. Then, when the lad completed tthe grind, he surveyed the book with undisguised pleasure, told him to keep walking, and called out his time and his previous best time.

Track Will Aid Scores

"This track," said Griffith, "is goinng to add 10 points to our meet scores this week, watch and see if it doesn't. We had it last year for the first time, but this is the year we begin to get results. This beats training in the gymnasium, and we can accomplish more out here by ourselves."

The track, incidentally, was built under Griffith's supervision and he had the pleasure of personally nailing down most of the planks. When Catholic University's annual indoor meet comes along he will, as usual, supervise the erection of the indoor track and busy himself with hammer and saw. But back to the track team.

Some 20 men are out for the team—the largest squad in recent years. When the pace gets too warm and the training too serious Dorsey expects to lose a few, but still expects to develop a winning team. He lost four men by graduation, former Capt. Corrado Goffredi, 12-

Stanford Co-eds Get 'Sports Fans' Course

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 6 (AP).—Stanford University co-eds, much to their delight, discovered a new course added to the curricula this quarter. It teaches them how to become "sports spectators," and they earn one unit credit.

The course was introduced by the women's physical education department, with outside lectures telling the girls about various sports.

Krakauskas Is Signed

Young Pitcher Gets A Bonus for Work

Joe Krakauskas, erstwhile ugly duckling of the Washington pitching staff, signed a 1939 contract yesterday at what Clark Griffith termed "a substantial increase in pay."

The blond lefthander, whose late-season pitching was the bright feature of the Nats' 1938 campaign, came to terms without a trace of debate, said Griffith. "Kragauskas' pay raise for 1939 is in the nature of a bonus for his good work last season," said the Nats' owner.

Winne of seven games and loser of five in 1938, Krakauskas is the third Nat to sign for 1939. A week ago Ossie Bluege became the first to accept a contract, and earlier yesterday Outfielder George Case returned a signed contract to Griffith. Case was another to be tendered a salary increase.

Dismissed by the Nats as a failure in early May and released to Trenton, Krakauskas rejoined the club a month later after Trenton found no use for him. Then he proceeded to pitch the most brilliant ball of any member of the Nats. His earned-run average was second only to that of Lefty Grove in the American League.

Toward the finish of the season, Krakauskas appeared to have conquered his one glaring weakness—lack of control. In his early trial with the Nats he appeared to be one of the Borneo Krakauskases—incurably wild. But his fast ball intrigued Griffith and he was given another chance despite his failure with the class B Trenton Club.

Navy's Talest Five To FaceGettysburg

Annapolis, Jan. 6.—With Bob Gillette, the former Devitt player, who is giving special attention to his scholastic work, out of the lineup, Navy will put one of the tallest basketball teams on the floor tomorro r against Gettysburg.

Capt. Bob Laney, who is 2 inches over 6 feet, will be shifted from guard to forward, in Gillette's place, with Larry Geis at the other forward. Mike Hanley, another District youth, who played at Western High, and Norman Lee, 2 inches over 6 feet, will be one of the guards.

It will also be the opening game for Gettsburg, but the Bullets are longer on veterans than the Navy.

50 Bowlers Seek Trophy

Anual Sweepstakes Event Opens Tonight

A field of 50 or more of the leaders of the country's duckpin domain will start the ninth annual Calvert United States sweepstakes at 12:30 this afternoon at Convention Hall and at the completion of the 15-game set, Astor Clarke, Nick Tronsky or one of the other competitors will be $1,000 and the Calvert trophy richer.

George Isemann, executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, has gathered one of the fastest fields in the history of the richest one-day pin event in duckpin annuals, to fire for the prize list that should reach $2,500

Clarke, winner the past two years and three times in the last six rollings, will naturally be in the favored role but locally Joe Harrison, Hokie Smith, recent sensation of the events here this season, and others will have their supporters.

Phil Spinella, nationally known Brooklyn ace; the members of Connecticut's famed Blue Ribbons, including Tronsky, Jack White and Wally Pipp, and the cream of the crop from Baltimore, Annapolis, Richmond, Norfolk, in addition to other duckpin centers will be on hand.

The entry of Milton (Monk) Walker, Government Printing Office ace, was received yesterday. He is regarded as a dangerous dark horse, having won the Pop Crawley and Charley Bell Sweepstakes last year, and the Evening Star Stakes the year before.

The $50 entrance fee limits the field to the very best in the game and Nick Tronsky's world record for 15 games, totaled when winning this event in 1933, 2,101 may be in danger from the fast field.

The first block will start at 12:30, the second at 3:30 and the final and pressure five games at 7:30 p. m. Over 2,000 fans are expected to jam the hall, which boasts the largest seating capacity for duckpin followers for the event.

Clarke Joins Semi-Pros

Winfield, Kans., Jan. 6 (AP).—Fred C. Clarke, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said today he had accepted appointment as director of the player contract system of the National Semipro Baseball Congress, which aims to put 200,000 sandlot players under contract in 1939.

'39 Service Game Sought By Chicago

Gen. Lorenzen Heads Committee Urging Transfer; to Give Plea to Roosevelt

By Jack Munhall.

Inspired by the coincidence that placed two Kanakee, Ill., boys, Harry Stella of Army, and Allan Bergner of Navy, as 1939 captains of the service elevens, Brig. Gen. A. F. Lorenzen, retired, of Chicago, said last night he is heading a committee to urge transfer of the 1939 Army-Navy game to Chicago.

Gen. Lorenzen with two fellow committee members, George D. Crowley and Roy Bennett, came here to "set the machinery rolling" by conferring with Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, and Col. Marvin H. McIntyre, President Roosevelt's secretary, and will return soon to formall present his resolution to the President.

Meanwhile efforts will be made to gain the support of the entire Illinois congressional delegation and civic organizations throughout the Mid-West. Appeals will be made to chambers of commerce, luncheon clubs and American Legion posts.

Wrigley on Committee

Included on the committee with Gen. Lorenzen are the names of such influential citizens as Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears & Roebuck Co.; Phil Wrigley, the chewing gum magnate, and Walter Cummings, president of the Continental Bank of Illinois, who is vice chairman.

Gen. Lorenzen estimated that it would cost approximately $500,000 to transport the service teams and their student bodies to Chicago, about the same as it cost in 1926, only other time the Windy City held the classic, but said that amount would easily be underwritten.

Declaring that the Army-Navy game belongs to the Nation and not to one section, Gen. Lorenzen said there was never a time that a city more rightfully deserved the classic than does Chicago next year.

"I call upon every American sportsman to back the movement that will transfer the 1939 Army-Navy game to Chicago," he said, "the mere fact that two Illinois boys captain their respective teams should act as a stimulant to every sportsman to assure the families of these boys the chance to see them play."

Unique Coincidence

"Never before has there been such a coincidence connected with this game and inasmuch as Chicago has proven it can support this game (more than 100,000 attended the 1926 game in Chicago) there is no reason why it should not be moved there."

"An Army-Navy game in Chicago would stimulate interest throughout the whole Middlewest in the two service schools, which would be a most wholesome development," Gen. Lorenzen said.

"As for Philadelphia, I don't think it will object to the transfer, in view of the fact that the families of both captains live in Kankakee, not far from Chicago."

Devitt Prepmen 27-10 Winners Over Annapolis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Jan. 6.—Len Stanton, with a trio of goals from the floor and line, led Devitt to a 27-to-10 victory over Annapolis this afternoon.

Kemp and Stanton started off with field goals which put Devitt ahead, 4 to 0, at once. Greeney scored Annapolis' first points with a field goal, but Devit led by 9 to 4 just before the close of the half. Connolly dropping the ball through from the line just as the half closed.

Vermillion started Devitt's scoring in the second half, and the gap was widened steadily until the final whistle.

Buck Newsom to Demand $20,000

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Jan. 6.—Louis (Buck) Newsom, who won 20 games with the seventh-place Browns while yielding a new major league record of 186 earned runs, said flatly today that he would not sign a 1939 contract calling for less than $20,000.

That amount was reported to be Dizzy Dean's salary with the Chicago Cubs, and what's good enough for Dizzy is good enough for Buck. When Dean was with the Cards, he and Newsom were "poppin' off" rivals on the field and close friends off.

Bill De Witt, business manager of the Browns, said Newsom's contract was discussed at the recent baseball meeting in New York, but no agreement was reached. He added, however, that Buck would figet a "substantial increase" over his 1938 salary, which was believed to be between $10,000 and $14,000.

BUCK NEWSOM

Newsom was able to win 20 games, although he allowed 5.07 earned runs per nine innings, because the Browns were "right" whenevere he was. On those occasions when Buck had an off day on the hill, the Browns usually were helpless at the bat.

The big righthander came here from his Harisville, S. C., home, primarily, he said, to get treatment for his right thumb, which was injured by a drive off the bat of Joe Gordon, New York Yankee second baseman.

While Newsom was in the office of the club physician this afternoon, Pie Traynor, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, called.

"I wish I had had a complete-game pitcher like you last September," Traynor told Newsom. "We wouldn't have lost that National League pennant."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Dizzy Dean, after penning his name to a $20,000 contract tendered him by the Cubs, looked grandly about and said: "If I don't win 20 games in 1939, I'll sign for nothing in 1940."

Which was doubtless greeted by a mental "Oh Yeah?" by the Cubs' officials who have had some experience in signing ball players. On the day that a big leaguer signs to play ball for nothing, 16 major league club owners will swoon. On the completely daft could conjure a picture of Dizzy Dean pitching gratis.

POVICH

This is the season of the year when the wailing is heard around the countryside. Ball players get their new contracts, note the salary arrangement, and begin to bleat loudly. To hear them tell it, they are misused, unappreciated and are asked to play for a pittance such as a mere $10,000 a year. They threaten to hold out and retire to their farms, or their filling stations or their bowling alleys.

Down at Hartsville, S. C., at this writing, Buck Newsome has already announced he is a holdout. He wants $20,000 as his fee for pitching for the Browns next year. The fact that his interest in the family's little farm would yield him no more than $3,000 for a season's work is blithely overlooked by Bashful Buck. He is reaching for big figures.

Should Learn Facts of Life

At that, Newsom appears entitled to a $20,000 contract if Dean is. Dizzy's contribution to the Cubs' 1938 pennant was a paltry seven victories. For most of the season he was useless to the club with his sore arm. Newsom turned in 20 victories for a seventh-place club, and pitched more complete games, 31, than any other hurler in either big league.

But deserving as he may be, if Newsom truly believes he can get a $20,000 contract from the Browns somebody ought to tell him the facts of life. The Browns are the poorest club in the big leagues. As in many other callings, it matters not, sometimes, how capable you are, but who work for. The Cubs, flowing in wealth, and prodigal with their pay roll, might conceivably pay Newsom $20,000, even more. But Newsom happens to be working for the lowly Browns.

It is amusing, though, to hear the boys threaten to quit baseball and stay on their farms unless their salary terms are met. No big league ball player has made good a holdout threat since Ed Rousch, and that happened back about 1915. They get mighty tard o' the corn pone, chitlins and black-eyed peas, especially when they know their erstwhile pals are dining off the fat of the land in swank hotels with the ball clubs picking up the tabs.

The big leaguers do travel first class, with no expense to themselves. Everything is strictly table d'hote and ala carte. No blueplates or businessmen's lunches. Mr. Edward B. Eynon, jr., secretary of the Washington club, was saying the other day that no Washington ball player in his 23 years as keeper of the exchequer has ever traveld in an uppr berth. He meant no reflection on the uppers, but was emphasizing that big league teams travel de luxe.

Players Worth All They Can Get

But there is no disposition by this department to condemn the ball player who is a salary holdout. The athlete is entitled to every dime he can wheedle out of the club owner, on the theory that the owner is not obliged to hire him. They may be overpaid for the work they do, but at contract-signing time there is nothing to compel a club owner to meet the player's terms.

It is a fact well known that a ball player when he signs a new contract is not being paid for what he is expected to accomplish during the season, but for what he did the previous year. Salaries are always a year behind time. If a player has a good season, he is paid for it in next year's contract. If he has a poor season, he takes the rap for it in his new contract.

The rookie who gets more than $5,000 in his first year is an exceptional case. Bobby Feller's first contract with the Cleveland Indians called for only $150 a month. But Joe DiMaggio was one notable exception. He badgered the Yankees into paying him $8,000 as a freshman, a salary that tops the pay of many big league veterans. But DiMaggio had the Yankees on the spot. They had paid $25,000 for him and given up an additional $25,000 in players. Babe Ruth had gone and the Yanks sorely needed another slugger. Consequently DiMaggio cashed in before his ability was established. And, as a second-year man the following season he made the Yankees up the figure to $15,000.

Concerning Joe Krakauskas

Another case in point is that of Joe Krakauskas. Last season the blond lefthander was, at once, Washington's best pitcher and the lowest paid. That can happen in baseball where the salaries are a year behind a player's progress. Buddy Myer, in 1938, had a sensational year, his best since 1935 when he won the league batting championship. But he was drawing his lowest salary since 1935. Next season he will be a year older, admittedly slipping, and a 10-to-1 shot to fail to equal his 1938 performance, yet he will be working at a substantial increase.

I like Clark Griffith's story of one of his hold-out experiences. Twenty years ago, he signed a busher from North Carolina and the fellow showed a bit of promise. The following winter, Griffith wrote him to report to training camp early and informed the fellow he was giving him a one-third increase in pay.

Promptly, he got a reply. "Look at my last season's record," he wrote. "I won't sign for a one-third raise. Unless I get a one-fourth increase, I'm gonna hold out."

It is assumed that Mr. Griffith met his terms.

Navy Shifts Grid Coaches; Larson's Aides Are Named

Wilson Made Head Plebe Coach, a New Job Created to Improve Future Squads

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Jan. 6.—Navy, in a major change of policy, moved today to strengthen its football forces by concentrating more attention on the material from which varsity teams are built—the plebes, or freshmen midshipmen.

Heretofore, a group of younger officers associated with the varsity coaching staff has handled plebe football.

"It is felt that appointment of a head coach for the plebe squad will give the first-year men groundwork in the fundamentals of the Navy football system so they will be better prepared when they are eligible for the varsity team," Commander Davis said.

"The change, with a head coach concerned solely with development of the plebe team, should make for better football."

Keith Molesworth, assistant varsity backfield coach and former pro star, was elevated to Wilson's post as chief backfield coach. E. E. (Rip) Miller was reappointed varsity line coach.

They will serve under Capt. Emery E. (Swede) Larson, Marine officer, who was appointed last month to succeed Lieut. Harry J. (Hank) Hardwick as head football coach. Hardwick was transferred to sea duty at his own request.

Some Navy men expressed dissatisfaction with the coaching setup after a season in which the Middies won only one major game, but the athletic authorities announced they would adhere to the custom of having Academy graduates as head football coaches.

Larson and his assistants should have some good material coming up to the varsity for the 1939 season. The Plebes won five games and lost one late fall.

The scores were: Plebes, 6; Georgetown Frosh, 0; Plebes, 19; Massanutten Military Academy, 7; Plebes, 51; Valley Forge Military Academy, 2; Plebes, 18; Bordentown Military Institute, 0; Plebes, 26; Kiski, 6; Plebes, 6; Hun School, 14.

Warwicks Play All-Stars Today in Charity Grid Game

Both Clubs Ready, Odds Are Even

Catholic U. Stadium Site of Battle; Warwicks Heavier Than Picked Aces

A 100 per cent post-season charity football game that should rank with the finest ever staged locally is scheduled for Catholic University stadium this afternoon at 2:15 o'clock, when John Jankowski's All-Stars oppose Charley Maloney's Warwick Athletic Club.

MALONE

All proceeds realized from this game are to be donated to the Washington Society for the Blind for the rehabilitation of the District's sightless. The money will be used to purchase equipment for stands to be operated by the blind in the lobbies of Federal buildings.

City-wide co-operation has been extended by civic-minded individuals and organizations in an effort to make today's game an unqualified financial success.

Everything Donated

Catholic University has donated its stadium, football officials their services, local businessmen the green and white jerseys to be worn by the All-Stars and orange and black livery of the Warwicks, a local sporting goods store the football and first aid equipment, District merchants the edibles and soda pop for the concession, and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club its fine 50-piece band, to say nothing of the services of the players and coaches themselves.

Bright, fair weather has been promised by the Weather Bureau and an ideal setting for football is the prospect. In lieu of the attractiveness of the game and fine cause involved the largest crowd to witness a charity football game in years is anticipated.

JANKOWSKI

Cream of Talent

Jankowski's 29-man District All-Star squad has been selected from the cream of six outstanding teams of Washington and vicinity, namely: Uline Ice Co., Virginia A. C., Anacostia Eagles, Southeast Merchants and Silver Spring Merchants. Though substantially outweighed by the Warwicks, the All-Stars boast outstanding men at every position and are several deep in most positions.

Charlie Malone, outstanding end of the Washington Redskins, personally will direct the Warwick A. C. and will make such changes as he sees fit and introduce such strategy as he deems advisable throughout the game.

One of the most brilliant duels of the day may result from an individual clashing of triple-threat backs when Fred ("Bunker") Hill, formerly an All High back at Roosevelt High School, and a Warwick, squares off against Billy Vermillion, an All High graduate of Central High School and an All Star.

Tickets are priced at 35 cents and ample parking space is available for motorists.

foot pole vaulter; Bill Weedon, Clem McCormack and Fred Mix—all middle-distance men, who averaged 16½ points a meet each. Without them in the line-up this year it's going to seem like playing baseball minus a first baseman.

But Griffith has a couple of veterans returning in John Corbett and Leo Wall whose combined efforts netted 193 points last year, who may take up the slack. Corbett ran a leg on the mile relay team and competed in the half-mile and mile runs. Wall was a high and low hurdler, high jumper, half-miler, and also carried the baton on the mile relay. Corbett turned in a 4:24 mile in his first year, and Griffith foresees a bright future for him at the distance.

One of the attributes of track at Catholic University is that one learns all there is to know about every event, because one never knows when one will have to fill in for an absent brother. Distance men, for example, frequently run in sprints, or hurdles, and vice versa.

Roger Cooper and Charley Moutenot, sprint men from last year, figure prominently in Griffith's plans. Cooper is improving steadily in the century, and Moutenot will also risk his neck, or, try his skill in the pole vault. Cooper also may heave the javelin or put the shot, although he doesn't know it yet.

Seriously, however, the Cardinals are well fortified in the spear-pitching department inasmuch as Pete Sachon, Mason-Dixon Conference champion, is back, along with Nick Sarelis. Pete's record is 172 feet 3¼ inches. Other veterans returning are Capt. Frank Cairo, John Carvelis, John Diamond and Pete Osinski, weight man, and Arthur Cranston, distance runner, and Al Gil Borges, pole vaulter.

Newcomers to the squad are Cleveland Stauffer, Jack Dovle, John Hutton, Bill Sheehy, Bernie Kelleyni, William Lesniewski, nard O'Keefe, George Brast, John Romeo Martini, Bob Preston, Berweachler, Gerald Eakle and Joe Neuland—all middle-distance men. Sprinters? Oh, Dorsey will have some if he has to run himself.

Virginia Ring Captain-Elect Is Ineligible

John Simpson Drops Behind in School Work; Blow to Team

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 6.—The University of Virginia's boxing team, which opens its 1939 season at Syracuse University January 14, took a hard one on the chin today when officials announced Captain-Elect John Simpson was ineligible because of scholastic deficiency.

Simpson, an outstanding collegiate bantamweight and a former Southern Conference champion in that weight, lost only one bout last year. He is an engineering student and was to have been graduated in June of this year.

Simpson's ineligibility means 72-year-old Coach Johnny LaRowe will open his season minus four of last year's regulars—Simpson, Maynard Harlow, welterweight; Ray Schmidt, light heavyweight, both national collegiate champions, and Billy weeks, heavyweight.

Virginia's prospective line-up, LaRowe said, stacks up something like this:

120 POUNDS—Platon Galley. No previous experience of consequence, but the only replacement for Simpson in view.

127 POUNDS—Ben Jacobs. Fighting his third year on the varsity, but has appeared mostly in the bantam division. Illness kept him on the bench last season, but he won one and lost one as a featherweight.

135 POUNDS—Dick Williams. This is Williams' second year on the varsity. Last year he split even, winning two and losing two.

145 POUNDS—Ashby Barksdale. Moved up from the 135-pound division, in which he won two and lost one last year.

153 POUNDS—Truman Southall. Appears as Virginia's outstanding boxer this season. As a sophomore he lost only to Ord Fink, of Syracuse.

165 POUNDS—Roy Bowman. Enjoyed only fair success as a freshman last year, but is regarded as a good varsity prospect.

175 POUNDS—Fenton Somerville. Leading candidate for Ray Schmidt's vacated post, but has no previous experience.

UNLIMITED—Art Bryant. A football tackle who was undefeated as a freshman boxer, but did not compete last season.

January 28, North Carolina, at Chapel Hill.

Cardinals' Ring Hopes Sag as Bunsa Is Lost

Catholic University's hopes for a successful boxing campaign suffered a severe blo when it was learned that Joe Bunsa, ace 135-pounder, will be lo to the team because of a reoccurrence of an old kidney ailment. Buns underwent an op tion a year ago, and it was thought he would be able to resume boxing after a year's absence from the sport. His departure leaves the Cards without an experienced man at the weight.

Gonzagans Lose, 19-12, To Eastern

Hancock High Scorer As Tide Rallies After Scorless First Quarter

A generous sprinkling of missed set-ups, eccentric passes and clumsy defensive efforts marked the play of both teams yesterday, as Eastern's defending champions in the inter-high basketball series eked out a 19-12 victory over a youthful Gonzaga squad on the Lincoln Park floor. Eastern was never in serious danger of losing the dull comedy of errors after the opening of the second period.

The White Tide trailed after the opening quarter, 2-0, but then ran up a quick lead and never was headed. The only basket in the first period was registered by Gonzaga's Fred Rice with less than 30 seconds of the 8-minute session remaining. The basket occurred after every man on both teams had taken a futile fling at the rim.

Eastern Goes Ahead

Probably the only concerted effort of the Easterners to score came in the first five seconds of the second period. The rest of the points were more or less by accident. A quick setting of the stage in mid court, and Capt. "Soup" Hancock passed accurately to Eerward Les Cooksey under the goal and his shot was good. It tied the count, Eastern pulling ahead immediately with long shots by Francis Battiste and Hancock. Gonzaga trailed, 6-5, at the half. Only one foul was called in the first half, despite the rough and tumble play.

Soon after the rest period Gonzaga came within 1 point of a deadlock when Forward Dullea made a foul chance good. Bob Custer, the transfer from Western, who had just entered the game, stopped the threat with a long shot, and Hancock followed it up with another. From 5 to 7 points separated the teams from then on.

Cooksey Plays Good Game

Credit for a well-played defensive game belongs to Eastern's Cooksey. Hancock was high pointman for winner, and game with 6 points. Cooksey made 6.

G-Men's Record Kept Perfect

The undefeated F. B. I. five registered its sixth straight victory and handed the Fort Myer quintet its first setback in seven starts by turning back the Soldier cagers, 41-32, in a U. S. Government league game last night at Bolling Field.

In other games, the Procurement team finally nosed out the CCC (NP-7) five, 39-38, to score their first victory in seven games. The score was tied ten times. In the opening game, the Army Medical Center downed the Navy Yard Marines, 40-32. Frank Elliott, former Yale star, moved into top scoring place in the league by accounting for 23 points.

G.W. High Five, Staunton Meet At Richmond

Game Will Open Annual Basketball Carnival Saturday Afternoon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Jan. 6.—George Washington High School basketers have been matched with Staunton Military Academy in the opening game of the tenth annual University of Richmond basketball carnival, to be held at the university tomorrok. Pairings for the tourney were announced by Glen Thestlewaite, athletic director of the university.

Pairings for the carnival, which gets under way at 2 o'clock, are as follows:

3:00—Benedictine School, of Richmond, vs. Fork Union Military Academy.

7:00—Thomas Jefferson, of Richmond, vs. E. C. Glass, of Lynchburg.

8:00—Central High vs. John Marshall, of Richmond.

Coach Albert Doran announced today that eight G. W. players will make the trip. They include Eddie Nowland, Eddie Dove, Jimmy Taylor, Stan Heflin, Ed Williams, Amos Clift, "Dinky" Scott and Jack Payne.

The Alexandria All-Stars, newly organized pro quintet, will inaugurate their season against the strong Hagerstown Pros tomorrow afternoon at Hagerstown, Md. The team is under the direction of John Travers.

Hartnett Hopes to Catch 100 Games Next Season

His Future Behind Plate Will Depend On Batting Eye

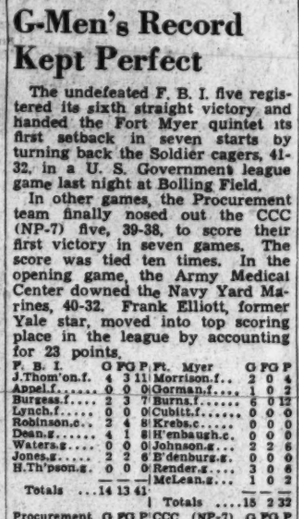
By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Manager Gabby Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs went into a huddle today with Player Hartnett of the Cubs and from conference came Gabby's prediction that he will catch 100 or more champions next summer.

games for the National League hundred mark again," he said, "and "I'm going to try and hit that I'll do it if the old batting eye holds out. In my mind, the question mark is my hitting. I'm not worried about my arms or legs, even though I'm going on 39 and it will be my 18th season in the majors. I can still throw and I can still get around well, at least as well as I have during the last few years. So if I can hit that ball I'll stay in there."

For 16 seasons, Gabby had ulife time batting average of .300 and his drop to .278 for last season troubles him no little. However, he slammed 10 homers and drove in 59 runs while playing in only 88 games. The thumb fracture he suffered in August kept him from setting a new record of 100-game catching in 12 seasons.

One thing Babby worried about last year apparently won't be back to give him the jitters in 1939. Replacing Ken O'Dea as No. 1 substitute next season will be the veteran Gus Mancuso, with young Bob Garbark ready to fill in when necessary. With those relief men, Gabby's mind should be more at ease than it was last season.



GABBY HARTNETT

Should Hartnett attain his goal of catching 100 games and Pitcher Dizzy Dean stage a comeback, the Cubs are certain to have a banner year at the ticket offices. Both have plenty of color, and with the fiery Dick Bartell at shortstop the Cubs may come up with a scrappy aggregation in place of the docile club that has been performing at Wrigley Field for several years.

Prep Football RuleChanged

Federation Allows Boys to Re-enter Game Any Time

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Another move toward safeguarding the health of the Nation's prep football players was made today when the National Federation Interscholastic Rules Committee decided a player may reenter the game in any or every quarter.

The rule, expanded after being limited to the fourth period last year, was one of three proposals adopted today, said H. V. Porter, secretary of the federation. Rules of the federation have been adopted in 25 States.

In adopting the rule for the 1939 season, Porter said the committee made its decision after a survey of last year's statistics, which disclosed most prep injuries occurred in the third period. Previous to adoption last year of the rule permittin a player to reenter the game in the fourth quarter only, statistics showed most injuries had taken place in the fourth period.

In an effort to make consistent the penalties for unsportsmanlike conduct by players and nonplayers, the committee decided the ruling should read: "If foul occurs while the ball in dead, the penalty (15 yards) shall be from the succeeding spot or where the ball is put into play on the next down. If the ball is in play, the penalty should be assessed from the spot of the preceding down."

Titles May Be Split By Horse Shows

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—The National Horse Shows Association today gave tentative approval o a proposal to designate certain of its shows throughout the country annually as national championships in one or more divisions.

Adrian Van Sinderen, of New York, who was re-elected president of the association at today's meeting, explained in his annual report that the executive committee has been studying the suggestion for some time. The idea, he explained, would be that "at such shows and in those divisions (designated as national championship classes) the management will enjoy the prerogative of awarding national championship ribbons to the winners."

The tentative program also included the following dates:

April 28-29, Lynchburg, Va.,
May 4-7, Chevy Chase, Md. (Washington Horse Show); 5-7, Atlanta; 6-7, Virginia Beach, Va.; 12-14, Norfolk, Va.; 26-27, Hampton, Va.; 27-28, Richmond, Va.
June 2-3, or June 16-17, Bassett, Va.; 9-10, High Point, N. C.; 9-10, Upperville, Va.
July 3-4, Culpeper, Va.
August 10-11, Hot Springs, Va.; 17-19, Berryville, Va.; 26 or September 9, Keswick, Va.; 31-September 2, Bel Air, Md.
September 2-4, Warrenton, Va.; 6, Fair Hill, Md.; 15-16, Orange, Va.; 16, Fairfax, Va.
October 6-7, Charlottesville, Va.; 19-22, Chevy Chase, Md. (Inter-American Horse Show).

Martinsburg Girls To Play Eleven Games

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., January 6.—An 11-game schedule for this year was announced today by Mrs. Helen Bentz, coach of the girls' basketball team at Martinsburg High School.

The team opens here tonight against the Harrisonburg (Va.) sextet in the initial part of a double-header, the boys' teams of the two schools playing the final half.

February 8, Harrisonburg, away; 10, Harpers Ferry, away; 14, Shepherdstown, home; 21, Charles Town, home; 23, Hedgesville, home; 28, Smithsburg, Md., home.

Western Defeats Montgomery Blair

Harold Beatty, playing his first year as a regular on Western's basketball team, paced his team to a 23-15 win over Montgomery Blair last night in the losers' gym. Beatty sank three field goals and as many foul shots for a nine-point otal.

Another Western recruit, Price, limited Montgomery County's high point scorer of last year, Johnny Norris, to but five points. The game got under way slowly, each team being called for numerous fouls. Score at the half was: Western, 10; Blair, 5.

K. C. Games First Indoor Track Meet

Cunningham, Lash, Herbert Feature Race Carnival in Brooklyn Armory

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 6.—The New Year's indoor track season will be opened with a flourish tomorrow night at the 245th Coast Artillery Armory in Brooklyn, where the Columbus Council K. of C. will stage a meet featuring three of the competitors who helped make the 1938 campaign one of the best in the sport's history.

In the order of the distances they will run on the armory's flat floor, this threescore consists of Slim Jim Herbert, seeking his third straight victory in the Columbus 500-meter race; Glenn Cunningham, back for another shot at the 800-meter Grand Knight Trophy special, in which he fell on the last turn a year ago, and Don Lash, the Indiana State policeman, who is entered for the 3,000-meter Conklin special.

Herbert used the 1938 K. of C. meet as a springboard to his greatest season, one that saw him win 12 of 14 races at 500 and 600 yards and meters. Cunningham, after his spill, went on to win 13 straight events, and Lash, beaten an eyelash by Archie San Romani as the latter set an American citizen's record of 8:27.4, dominated the distance-running field from then on.

Of the three Cunningham alone has presented evidence that he is in fine shape. The big Kansan set a Sugar Bowl mile record of 4:10.7 on New Year's Day, and because of that performance no one is showing any apprehension over the fact that he won't get into town until tomorrow morning, little more than 12 hours before post time.

Herbert will be one of four defending champions in the Brooklyn meet. The others are Gene Venzke, popular New York A. C. veteran, in the 800; burly bob Rodenkirchen, also of the New York A. C., in the 60, 80 and 100-meter sprint series, and San Romani. With Cunningham and Lash, they are the top choices in their four events.

But they won't lack for competition. The fields in the 800 and 3,000 appear to be the best balanced. In the former Cunningham and Venzke will face Charley Beetham, N. C. A. A. half mile champion while at Ohio State; Howie Borck, I. C. 4-A outdoor mile record holder; Frank Slater, of Fordham, national indoor 1,000 meter champion, and Leslie MacMitchell, N. Y. U. freshman who may be running all of the milers into the ground a few years from now.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

VIDMER

New York, Jan. 6.—It was during the late lamented holidays and someone suggested that we all go to Pinehurst for New Year's and sort of taper off, when up spoke a gay caballero whom we shall call Jack Stevenson, principally because everybody else does, his real name being Gethryn "I, for one am not going to Pinehurst for New Year's," he declared with a positive air, and when pressed for reasons he explained that he had been to Pinehurst for New Years before and once was enough.

It seems that several years ago he went with a convival group whose tastes turned mainly toward golf, poker, and good Scotch whiskey. And among the crowd was a gentleman rather advanced in years who could give all three hobbies an amazing play in spite of the fact that he was over 70.

The golf and poker went on for three days and three nights without interruption and the Scotch whisky accompanied both, so that when the fourth morning dawned everyone was more or less in an advanced state of jitters. That, however, didn't keep them from playing golf as usual, and it happened that they came to the eighteenth green with the elderly member of the group facing a long rolling, side hill putt for all the money in the match.

He peered at the line through blood-shot eyes and took his stance with shaking hands. They shook a little even under normal conditions, but under the pressure of the moment and the previous night's revelry they shook even more. And just then, to add to his worries, a big, brown dog dashed out from behind the clubhouse, galloped across the green and right between his legs.

But without batting an eye, without even a frown, he went right through with his putt—and sank it!

There were exclamations of awe, followed by cheers and congratulations.

"What a putt!" they howled, "and with that dog running between your legs just as you were about to stroke it too!"

The old gentleman looked up with a dazed, panicky expression in his eyes.

"Good Lord!" he exclaimed, "don't tell me that was a real dog!"

Count Maurice, Paying $13.80, Wins Tropical Park Feature Race

Don Meade Gets Mount On Winner

Knight Warrior Is Second; Old Story Takes Show Money In Feature Race

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 6.—Count Maurice, a 5-year-old son of Reigh Count from the W. Durkin barn, scored his second triumph in as many 1939 starts when he outran six other $2,500 platers in the 1 1-16 miles Andalusia Purse here today. Mrs. F. B. Ponce's Knight Warrior trailed the victor by a length and a half while beating Mrs. Ethel L. Jacobs' Old Story, the favorite, by a half length for the place. Count Maurice paid $13.80 and finished in 1:46 2-5.

The recently reinstated Don Meade got the mount on the winner when the 5 pounds apprentice allowance was waived. Another veteran jockey who had been out of competition a long time received a fine reception from the crowd as the efild appeared on the track for the feature. This was Eddie Litzenberger, the Calgary, Alta., saddlesmith, who fell and broke a leg at Jamaica in the spering of 1937.

The game little fellow broke the same leg twice after that in mishaps that occurred just when he was contemplating a return to action. Riding Mistralkin, saddled by his old employer, George Phillips, "Litzy" finished last, his mount being badly outrun all the way.

Count Maurice broke fast from the outside post position. Meade hustled hi mto the front going to the first turn and kept the gelding on the head end the remainder of the journey. Celestino had enough of the pace after straightening on the backstretch. Knight Warrior supplied keen contention thereafter, but Count Maurice gradually pulled away in the stretch drive. Old Story was too late getting into stride to prove a threat.

Macie Margaret was much too good for the 3-year-old platers opposing her in the seventh event. Closing at $9.60 for $2 and piloted by Apprentice Ashcroft, the filly followed the fast but stopping Holiday Tea for 6 furlongs of the mile and 60-yard test, then put the leader away and drew into the clear. She won by three lengths. Lady Hav lasted to save the place by a half length from Brown Ben.

Irving Anderson snapped out of a prolonged slump when he booted Shohola to a head victory over Coronado in the sixth contest of a mile and 60 yards. Remus-Gina, after a poor getaway, came along in time to be third, two lengths behind.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD KNIGHTESS, $23.20, $9.00, $6.20; TAKUS, $4.10, $3.20; GREEN MELON, $4.70.

GOLD KNIGHTESS, going in close pursuit of the leader on the inside in the opening half mile, swung to the outside on the stretch turn and closed with determination to win going away under steady pressure. TAKUS began fast, displayed the most speed, but was no match for the winner in the stretch run and pulled up very sore. GREEN MELON broke tardily, gradually bettered his position in the final three furlongs and wore CANDAR down in the last stride. CANDAR saved much ground, but could never get up. DEAD READY was taken very wide on the stretch turn and lost considerable ground.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:28. Off 2:30. Winner, L. H. Smith's b. g. (4), by Jack High—Diagnosis. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE TARZAN, $12.80, $4.30, $3.00; IRENE'S BOB, $3.30, $2.40; WHISPER, $2.80.

LITTLE TARZAN, on the outside all the way, bettered his position rounding the turn and, closing gamely, wore IRENE'S BOB down through the stretch to win going away. IRENE'S BOB broke well, forced the pace and raced STAROGAN into defeat in the opening three furlongs, drew out on the stretch turn, but faltered when challenged. WHISPER, prominent the entire trip, came to the inside entering the stretch, saving much ground, but could not overtake the leaders. FLICKERING stole through on the inside all the way and had no excuses. STAROGAN quit after going three furlongs.

Daily Double, Gold Knightess and Little Tarzan, Paid $256.90.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:56. Off 2:59½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIXED WEATHER, $6.10, $4.40, $3.10; SEMESTER, $12.70, $6.30; TOWN CAR, $3.50.

MIXED WEATHER, keen contender from the start while racing well off the inner rail, responded courageously when the final issue came to outlast SEMESTER. The latter, going well up while saving ground, moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but hung in the closing strides. TOWN CAR outbroke the field but was quickly outrun, gained steadily in the last quarter mile under punishment, but could not reach the leaders. MISS DE MIE, rushed to the front, was caught between the leaders when straightened into the stretch and was crowded back.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:26. Off 3:27½. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESCOHIGH, $4.60, $2.70, $2.70; BUBBLESOME, $3.10, $3.20; ORIENT EXPRESS, $4.70.

ESCOHIGH broke in tight quarters and, pinched back in the opening furlong, slipped through on the inside leaving the backstretch to take command midway around the turn and maintained her advantage the remainder of the trip gamely. BUBBLESOME, prominent contender on the outside all the way, closed with good courage, but could not get up. ORIENT EXPRESS, well up the entire trip, disposed of the others in the last furlong. KERMAY finished stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:53. Off 3:56. Winner, W. Durkin's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNT MAURICE, $13.80, $5.50, $3.90; KNIGHT WARRIOR, $5.30, $3.50; OLD STORY, $3.20.

COUNT MAURICE moved to the front rapidly while crossing the field going to the first turn, was rated in front while saving the most ground and had something in reserve when challenged to outlast KNIGHT WARRIOR in the final drive. KNIGHT WARRIOR, on the outside of the leader and a keen factor the entire trip, hung slightly in the stretch run. OLD STORY, under restraint until turning out of the backstretch, moved up gradually on the outside, but could not overhaul the leaders. DARK BEAU bettered his position while saving ground rounding the lower turn, but faltered as if short. TEXAS ROSE weakened after going six furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:23. Off 4:25. Winner, Mrs. C. S. Bromley's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOHOLA, $11.80, $5.20, $4.00; CORONADO, $6.60, $4.20; REMUS-GINA, $3.70.

SHOHOLA, showing excellent speed, raced EGRESS into submission the first five furlongs, drew clear rounding the lower turn, then bore out and lost ground, but came again and outlasted CORONADO. The latter, lightly restrained, moved up gradually while saving much ground, took a brief lead through the stretch, but faltered in the closing strides. REMUS-GINA broke tardily, gained steadily after going a half mile and was easily best of the others. BAKED BIBESCOT finished stoutly. EGRESS stopped to a walk after going five furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:51. Off 4:52. Winner, C. B. Sturm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACIE MARGARET, $9.60, $5.40, $3.80; LADY HAV, $5.40, $4.30; BROWN BEN, $9.50.

MACIE MARGARET, away forwardly, was steadied behind the leader to the stretch turn, moved to the front rapidly at the furlong pole and held away the remainder of the trip. LADY HAV, under light restraint early, moved into contention rounding the lower turn, finished gamely to punishment and outlasted BROWN BEN. The latter, vigorously urged, gained steadily along the inner rail in the last half mile and closed stoutly. STEPACOLA was hard ridden all the way.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:19. Off 5:20½. Winner, J. Bachrach's b. m. Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al,

Jockey Stirling Young, who was badly injured in a spill at Tropical Park on opening day, has been discharged from University Hospital and will convalesce at his home in Miami. While he is well on the road to recovery Young will be unable to resume riding before the close of Hialeah Park's meeting.

Warren Yarberry, leading apprentice at the current Gables session, kept his own count of winners he rode in 1938 and says hte total is 151. This differers from the official record which credits him with only 147 winners. "I'm sure," said the Dallas lad, "my count is correct. I kept a record, track by track, since I rode my first winner at Suffolk Downs last May 19. The total is 151 and not 147." Yarberry, a protege of E. B. Carpenter, now is under contract to Joseph E. Widener, president of Hialeah Park.

John A. Morris, secretary-treasurer of Saratoga Racing Association, was on hand to see Persuasive romp to victory here. Persuasive carried the silks of Saratoga Stable, of which Morris is joint owner with George H. Bull, president of New York's famous up-state course.

Bill Hartman, trainer for Oaktree Stable, is still taking things easy, although he appears much improved in health. He was stricken with a heart attack at Narragansett Park last fall. In his early days he was an athlete in California and accounted a star football player. He visits the track here in the morning but seldom stays on to watch the races in the afternoon.

Daddy of the platers in training at the local tracks is the 11-year-old Al Neiman, owned by B. G. Guth and trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Other veterans of the turf wars, still going strong, are the 10-year-olds Bahamas, Espinaca, Irene's Bob, Crystal Prince, and Ladfield.

James Bird, who brought out the veteran Jockey Joe O'Malley, will handle the book of Jockey Charles Landolt during the Hialeah meeting. Landolt is noted for being alert at the barrier astride 2-year-olds.

BILL.

First race—Merry Caroline has worked well hereabouts and should make the most of the rail position in this sprint. I'm looking to Jockey Wilson for a good ride. Odd Blue has some class despite recent poor races. This appears to be a likely spot for a crackdown. Baydrop, with Arcaro up, could be a threat.

Second race—Bartering Kate gets a nice piece of weight off, thanks to the apprentice allowance, and may step home in front of this gang. Aunt Flor showed good closing ability in that recent outing. I'm still waiting for Gurkha to turn in that winning performance.

Third race—I'm going to string along wtih the combination of Saranite and Jockey Don Meade in this event. However, I've a lot of respect for Lady Orchid. She gets the rail position and if she escapes trouble she will be right in there battling at the end. Crimea for the show end.

Fourth race—The Calumet Farm entry seems to hold a strong hand in this with Sure Off and Easy Mon as representatives. The first named has the best chance of taking down the main dough. Pit Terrier and Sir Asia, teamed as the Strouble Entry, should get part of the money. General Howes is a good one and may surprise.

Fifth race—Harp Weaver gets in this with light weight and has those recent game performances to recommend him. Merritt is a front rider and may keep this one in front. Little Shaver has been kidding and may be ready to be turned loose. No Sir for the minor award.

Sixth race—Quicker turned in a fine second for use last out and needs to improve but little to score here. The Story and Steel King for the place and show money.

Seventh race — Headin Home comes off a smashing race and seems capable of duplicating it. Needs on the right ride. Ballystratford and Kindred Spirit are sharp as tacks and should make a keen battle for the top one.

Eighth race—Onrush figured in a dead heat early in the week and will have Arcaro up, according to the overnight jockey list. Bosonia and Never Cease to battle it out for the other awards.

Best Bet—Headin Home.

Mt. Rainier Wins, 26-15

Washington-Lee Five Bows; Howell Star

Mount Rainier High added a victory to its basketball ledger yesterday on the home court, trampling the cagemen of Washington-Lee High, 26-15. Center Howell of the losers earned high point honors with nine, but Chuck O'Conner, Mount guard, ran him a close second with eight.

Slow in getting started, the Little Generals dug themselves out of 10-0 deficit in the opening quarter to come within three points of the eventual winners midway of the third period. The pace was to hot, however, and Mount Rainier won with a flourish.

It was late in the second period that W.-L. scored its first field goal. Those two points and a foul shot were the extent of its tallying in the first half. The Generals scored 10 points to Mount Rainier's 3 in the third period, but a final rush beat them.

Macfarland Soccer Team Gets Letters

23 Are Awarded Testimonials of 'Gentlemanliness'

Twenty-three of MacFarland Junior High's best soccer players received athletic letters yesterday, in an assembly of the student body, but the honor was not merely a recognition of each lad's soccer ability. It was testimonial to his "gentlemanliness" as well.

For the past two weeks a list of the candidates eligible for letters had been posted on the school's bulletin board, so that every teacher who passed could check on whether the players conducted themselves as gentlemen or not. Only two of the original list were dropped because of black marks by faculty members.

Soccer is the main intra-school sport of MacFarland, the only interschool sport at present being track in season. Some time ago a junior high soccer league, of which MacFarland was the champion for many years, was abandoned. Now there are many class teams which play among themselves for the school title.

Athletic Director J. T. Donovan, a chunky Irishman from Indiana University, is busy every day now teaching his former soccer players to handle a basketball. This sport, too, is confined to competition within the school. Donovan's basketball drills, however, send the boys into the high scholos with fundamentals enough for the coaches to start on. The best of the crop is taken over by Coach Herman Littman, of Roosevelt High when the boy's junior high days are over.

Triple Play-Off Starts Tonight

Victory Post and Plaza Beverage meet at 8 o'clock tonight at Tech gym in a play-off game for the first half championship of the Community Center Indoor Softball League. At 9:30 athletic directors of the Community Center Department and the Washington Boys Club will clash in a basketball game.

The softball game is the first of a three-game series necessitated by a triple-tie among Victory Post, Plaza and Community Center All-Stars.

Victory Post Manager Morris Bealle is sending "Tarzan" Webb to the mound. Ferdie Johnson is expected to be Plaza's pitching choice.

Tech Downs City College

Baltimoreans Lose By 43-31 Score

A heavily favored Baltimore City College five, seeking its sixth victory in seven games, instead drew a blank at Tech gymnasium yesterday as Bruce Kessler's Maroon Midgets played their most consistent ball of the young season to win, 43 to 31.

The Baltimoreans drew a blank named Eli Blank, Tech's diminutive forward, who drew a bead on their basket and pumped through 16 points, 5 of which came in quick succession in the last quarter, and halted their rally.

Recent conqueror of Roosevelt, and beaten only by strong Baltimore Poly, City College was expected to hand Tech its second straight defeat, but after the opening minute of play the Maroon was never threatened. It was Tech's third victory.

City College hopped away to a 3-0 lead on a basket and foul by Dick Working, but just as quickly Blank knotted the count with a set shot and a charity throw. The score then teetered first in the visitors' favor and then in Tech's, until Blank and Jack Walsh got warmed up.

They threw in seven points and Tech led, 12-5 at the end of the quarter, and then they tossed in 10 more and Tech led, 23-15, at half. Moe Schulman got the other Tech point.

Tech managed to maintain its eight-point margin and at times to increase it until the last six minutes when Marvin Posner, City College's high scorer with 10 points, set about to reduce it.

He contrived to cut the deficit from 24-34 to 31-37, but Blank rapidly slapped in a pair of baskets and a free throw and that was that.

3 Conference Fives Join War on Paralysis

New York, Jan 6.—Three Southern Conference basketball teams—South Carolina, Furman and V. P. I.—have joined the war against infantile paralysis.

Grantland Rice, chairman of the National Sports Council of the committee for the celebration of the President's birthday, today was notified that the varsity quints of South Carolina and Furman will meet January 17 at Columbia, S. C., while V. P. I. will oppose Hampden-Sidney College February 22 at Blacksburg, Va., in benefit games as part of the Nation-wide drive to raise funds to fight this dread disease.

Other Southern colleges who have volunteered are Lambuth College of Jackson, Tenn.; Cumberland University, of Lebanon, Tenn.; Bethel College, of McKenzie, Tenn.; Lenoir-Rhyne College, of Hickory, N. C., and Atlantic Christian College, of Wilson, N. C.

Sholls, Hagerstown Bowlers Vie Tonight

Cotton's Mother Ill

Forrest (Fod) Cotton, Catholic University basketball coach, left by plane yesterday for Kansas City, Mo., to join his mother, who is critically ill of pneumonia.

G.W. Quintet Travels for Roanoke Tilt

Colonials Seek Fourth Victory Tonight as Maryland Tackles Army at West Point

George Washington University's basketball team moves into action tonight for the first time since the holidays, and is likely to encounter spirited opposition from the Roanoke College five, which is host to the Colonials at Roanoke, Va. The smoothly operating Colonial quint is seeking its fourth straight victory.

Since losing their first game at Ohio State, the Colonials slowly have attained the precision and power expected of them. They are shooting well and their ball handling has improved appreciably. Jack Butterworth's return to the linelup also has added great strength, particularly in the handling of rebounds and general ofensive play.

Roanoke is operating with the same line-up that carried it to 15 victories in 16 games last year, including the Old Dominion State championship, and to the final round of the national tournament at Kansas City.

They have been highly successful thus far this season, losing only to Villanova in a schedule of half-dozen testing engagements. On their own floor, as is generally the case in basketball, these boys are very hard to keep in hand.

With Butterworth, Bob Faris, Sid Silkowitz and George Garber, all experienced operatives, playing well, Reinhart has only the problem of a fifth starting player to worry him. Just now the tiny Dave Osborne is leading the battle for this position and he will probably start tonight.

Tonight's meeting is the first of a home-and-home series for these teams, with Roanoke scheduled to play the Colonials here next Thursday night.

Maryland Seeks First Win on Road

Still seeking its first victory on the road, Maryland's five will meet Army at West Point tonight. The Terps, beaten by Penn in their last start, have lost three straight games on foreigfin floors to offset as many victories at home.

Maryland's lineup probably will include Adam Bengoecher and George DeWitt, forwards; Eddie Johnson, center, and Pershing Mondorff and George Knepley, guards.

Time Limit Is Set For Va. Golden Gloves

Richmond, Va., Jan. 6 (AP).—Joe Bauers, secretary of the State boxing-wrestling commission, said today all clubs planning to enter the Virginia A. A. U. Golden Gloves Tournament should complete their elimination series not later than February 1.

City eliminations will be held in Richmond January 30 and 31 and February 1. The State finals will be held March 1-3. The New York Daily News Golden Glove Tournament will be staged March 13-14.

Hockey Game Tomorrow

The Silver Spring Rolladrome and John's Club hockey teams, will meet at the Silver Rolladrome, Silver Spring, Sunday, at 9:15 p. m.

Charges Filed Against N. Y. Football Giants

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—An eight-count information against the New York Football Giants, Inc., was filed by Assistant United States Attorney Jesse Moss today charging the sale of eight tickets for admission to the championship game between the Giants and the Green Bay Packers last December 11 at prices in excess of the printed face-value of the tickets.

Conviction on the information, which carries the same force as an indictment, would involve a maximum penalty of fines totalling $2,400.

Boys Club Tourney Entries Close Friday

Entries for the Southeast Boys Club basketball league for teams of 90, 105, 120 and 135 pounds will close Friday, January 13. The winning team in each class will be awarded individual prizes and a team trophy.

Teams interested in joining the league are requested to get in touch with Charlie Reynolds, at 0949.

Central Swims Southeast Boys This Afternoon

The Southeast Boys Club and Central High School swiming teams will meet at the Boys Club at 3 o'clock.

The order of events: 50-yard dash, 100-yard breast strike, 220-yard dash, 100-yard back stroke, 150-yard medley, 200-yard relay, free style relay and fancy diving.

Litzenberger Rides In 'Comeback' Race

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 6 (AP).—Eddie Litzenberger, formerly one of the country's leading jockeys, returned to the saddle at Tropical Park today after being out two years with injuries. He rode Mistralkin in the featured Andalusia Purse, but finished last in the field of seven.

"Litzy," who comes from Calgary, Alberta, fell and broke a leg at Jamaica in May, 1937, and then broke the same leg twice more just as he was about to return to action.

Exchange Central Depository Plan Gains Support

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Increased support in banking and brokerage circles for a proposed central depository to handle securities traded on the New York Stock Exchange was reported today to have resulted from a study of the plan under way since it was broached last August by William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

An accounting firm employed by the exchange to survey costs of the depository has indicated to the special committee studying the plan that it would report favorably on costs. Also big banks—at first cool toward the idea—have shown willingness to co-operate if the exchange adopts the plan.

The central depository would concentrate the handling and safeguarding of securities now scattered among brokerage firms and banks. The study made by the accounting firm, it was reported, calculated that centralization would eliminate from 35 to 63 per cent of the receipts and deliveries of securities now passing through member firm offices.

Britain Shifts Billion More To Aid Pound

Exchange Advances To $4.68, Up 3 Cents Closing at $4.67⅜

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 6.—The Bank of England today turned over gold valued at more than £200,000,000 to the exchange equalization fund in a move aimed to strengthen the British currency. Pressure on the pound sterling in foreign exchange markets since the Munich pact crisis in September had sent the currency so low it threatened to disrupt ordinary international commercial transactions and interfere with government finance, bankers said.

The bank still carries gold on its book at the statutory price of 84 shillings 10½ pence an ounce, despite depreciation of the currency in terms of gold since 1931. The control fund, however, is expected to value the metal at the current market price, which was 149 shillings 6 pence an ounce today. That would make an addition to its funds of £330,000,000 ($1,587,000,000 on a basis of $4.67 for the pound).

Financial authorities estimated the control fund held less than £100,000,000 gold before the shift of metal from the bank. Before the transfer, the Bank of England's gold reserves totaled £575,000,000 at the market price for the metal.

The exchange fund was empowered under the tri-partite monetary agreement with France and the United States to smooth out violent changes in the market value of sterling, but its operators were not designed to halt major trends up and down.

British Unit Jumps

New York, Jan 6 (AP).—The British currency swung sharply upward in terms of the dollar today as world money markets watched the efforts of the English authorities to bolster the position of the pound sterling against an outgoing tide of funds from Europe.

The foreign exchange market, dominated for some time by a fall in the pound under pressure of a movement of capital from London to New York, was electrified by a report that £200,000,000 had been transferred from the gold reserves of the Bank of England to bolster the British equalization fund.

Swinging erratically, the British exchange rate—down to around $4.62 earlier in the week—jumped up to around $4.68 for a gain of more than 3 cents compared with yesterday's closing rate. It lost part of the gain later, closing at $4.67⅝.

Gold Importations Lower for Weak

Gold imports declined in the week ended December 30. The Commerce Department said yesterday the drop was to $23,911,055, from $40,494,340 in the week ended December 23. Gold exports in the latest week totalled $1,759, compared with $8,379 in the preceding week.

Silver imports declined to $3,350,-335, from $5,363,618 in the week before. Silver exports fell to $24,808, from $273,349 in the preceding week.

Stocks Hold Firm Without Definite Trends Foreign Exchange Situation the Feature Prime Investment Bonds in Demand

New York, Jan. 6.—Stocks milled about today with no definite trend discernible in any group and transactions were restricted to less than a million shares. High-grade bonds continued to strengthen in response to investment demand with speculatives following the zig-zag course of equities. Cotton and wheat gave disappointing performances, the former closing 2 to 16 points down, while the latter was unchanged to ¼ cent lower.

Overshadowing interest in securities markets were new developments in the foreign exchange situation, centering about the action of the Bank of England in revitalizing the sterling stabilization fund to the extent of approximately $1,-700,000,000 by transfer of £20,000,000 gold ($20.64 an ounce valuation) to the fund where, at the world gold price, it represents around £350,000,-000. This represented a further and important step by Britain to relieve pressure on the pound arising from concern in world markets over that country's economic position, the real state of which is more or less concealed behind simulated prosperity arising from arms-making activities.

Earlier in the week London banks took steps to curb speculation in sterling exchange, which followed action by the British treasury in reimposing the embargo on foreign loans. The British equalization fund has been under a severe strain for a long period and since the middle of 1938 is estimated to have depleted its backlog of gold to the extent of about $1,250,000,000.

Sterling Recovers

News of the British bank's latest move brought about a swift reversal in the trend of foreign currency quotations, the pound recovering sharply as shorts covered and other European exchanges firming against the dollar.

Stocks started well with traders looking for a sustained rally but offerings came out at the better levels and the greater part of the session was taken up in backing and filling movements.

After careful analysis of the budget, Wall Street's commentators were inclined to regard the Federal fiscal picture as depressing. It was true that the estimated deficit for the 1939-1940 fiscal year of $3,326,-000,000 was not any larger than average private estimates. Nor was there any surprise that the Administration is resolved to hew to the line of spending rather than economy, letting the deficits fall where they may. After ten years of deficits and a tripling of the national debt, however, there are indications that even the most care-free of citizens are becoming alarmed.

Estimated total national debt at the end of the 1939-1940 fiscal year will certainly be within $500,000,000 of the legal limit. This points to the likelihood that Congress will be asked to extend borrowing power before the end of its present session. How alse can an administration as expensive to run as Mr. Roosevelt's continue?

Budget Message

At any rate, it became evident that the market not only did not receive strength from the budget message, but actually sustained hurt. As the enormous deficits and huge additions to the country's debt are continued, it becomes clearer than ever that not one of the important economic problems facing the Government and the people have been solved. Presents of cash to the farmers, gifts and subsidies to privileged groups, unprecedented additions to Federal pay rolls and prolongation of the unemployment sore by mismanagement of relief, have merely allayed and deferred solution, making it vastly more difficult to effect the permanent cure. The fact is plain that business, whether in its present or a considerably more prosperous state, cannot afford the luxury and extravagance which parades under the guise of necessity at Washington.

Many of the low-priced stocks again figured heavily in stock exchange dealings, with Loft, Richfield Oil, Continental Motors and Paramount among most active descriptions. Of 757 issues traded on the big board, 314 advanced and 246 declined, but most of the gains were recorded by relatively inactive issues. The composite of the 100 leaders ended 0.07 lower.

Treasury Bonds Strong

Listed bond dealings today reflected rising prices for high grade investment securities, and an irregular downward trend for bonds with a speculative tinge. The need of institutional investors for more earnings assets was especially pronounced in United States Treasury securities. Fourteen Treasury issues moved to fresh highs for recent years, and in many of these instances the records were for all time. Speculative and foreign bonds were less in demand, as the uncertain tone of the equities market kept spirits low. Turnover was $7,690,000.

The performances of long term Treasury issues surprised the old hands of Wall Street, for it was rather anticipated that prices would fall on the Administration plans for further deficits. For the moment, however, market considerations outweighed the gloomy prospect of indefinite increases of Federal indebtedness. Insurance companies and banks were buyers, and prices moved up 1-32 to 10-32 point. Trading was active over the counter, but formal dealings remained small. Best grade corporate bonds were affected by the same considerations, and some highs were registered also in such securities.

Secondary railroad liens were quiet and irregular. Some of the better rated intermediate rails were better, but borderline bonds drifted lower and most default issues also were soft. Holding company bonds were little changed, while industrial convertibles also held their ground.

Communications issues, speculative industrials and local traction bonds all moved lower, on the decline of speculative enthusiasm.

Chilean and Colombian issues were better in the foreign dollar default group, while other Latin-American bonds were dull. German and other European disregarded pledges remained irregular. Italian bonds improved, while Japanese issues dropped. Best grade foreigns showed small movements in either direction.

Bank and Insurance Stocks Gain in Year

New York, Jan. 6.—After several major market movements, New York City bank stocks closed only slightly lower during 1938, Hoit, Rose & Trostar state in their annual review. The firm's weighted average of 17 representative issues opened the year at 43.02, rose to year's high of 47.94 on January 10, declined to year's low of 35.94 on March 31 and closed the year at 42.53, a net decline of only 1 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also maintained a steady trend during the year and closed 18 per cent higher, the report stated. The weighted average of 20 issues opened January 3 at 43 but declined to the year's low of 38.11 on March 31. Late in the year, however, the year's high of 51.69 was reached, on November 12. The close was at 50.56, for a net gain of 18 per cent on the year.

Chicago Bank Deposits Highest on Record

Chicago, Jan. 6 (AP).—Fifty-four national and State banks in Chicago reported today total deposits of $3,388,799,000 as of December 31, the highest in their history. This was $410,618,000 more than the deposits a year ago, and $195,663,000 above deposits on September 28, 1938.

Cash resources also were at an unprecedented high level of $1,430,-089,000, which was $350,724,000 above a year ago. Loans and discounts showed a decrease of $108,134,000 from a year ago, but the total, $621,179,000, was $15,209,000 above the figure on last September 28.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended December 31 as approximately 7,900,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 6,066,000 tons; 1936, 7,695,000 tons. Percentage of increase: 1937, 30.2 per cent; 1936, 3.1 per cent.

New Financing

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—New financing, usually minimum in the year-end holiday period, fell during the week ended January 5 to $6,426,-500, Poor's Publishing Co., reported today.

Corn Higher, Wheat Rallies After Decline

Mills and Elevators Are Chief Buyers; Shorts Take Profits

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Wheat prices staged a rally after midsession today, wiping out early losses of as much as ¾ cent and closing unchanged to ¼ lower compared with yesterday.

Higher corn quotations throughout most of the session and renewed purchasing of wheat on the slight decline helped the rally. The buying was attributed to mill and elevator interests. Reports of armed clash on the Ruthenian-Hungarian border in central Europe attracted notice but apparently had little market effect.

Although no rain of consequence was reported in drought areas of the winter wheat belt, particularly in Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma, the weather was unsettled and rain or snow was promised for some regions. This depressed prices during early trading but when selling subsided the market found support from several sources. Purchasing by previous sellers presumably to take profits on their "short" sales and by dealers removing hedges on wheat sold through the Government for export was reported.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ off, May, 69¾@69⅞; July, 69⅞@70; corn, unchanged to ⅝ higher; May, 53½@53⅝; July, 54½@54⅝; oats, unchanged to ⅛ up; rye, unchanged to ½ higher; lard, 2 up to 3 down.

At the annual meeting of the American Building Association last night shareholders re-elected Charles Kattelmann as president for the coming year. Dr. Milton H. Prosperi will continue as chairman with Arthur C. Balser, vice president; Wilfred H. Blanz, secretary; Guy M. Neely, treasurer; Howard B. Kramer, assistant secretary, and R. Lee Baxter, assistant treasurer. Directors named were John F. Mergner, Clarence F. Donohoe, Chatham M. Towers, Thomas S. Sergeon, Charles A. Rossiter, Dr. William C. Farmer, Charles H. Kindle and Kattelmann, Balser, Neely and Blanz.

It was announced that John J. Carmody and William C. Gloth would serve as attorneys for the association, which began business August 6, 1874. The shareholders complimented President Kattelmann for his 27 years' service as director and officer as well as Mr. Kindle who has been connected with the organization for 28 years, Mr. Neely 25 years and Mr. Mergner 17 years. The past year, according to Secretary Blanz, saw American's assets reach a new high in excess of $11,-000,000, which is 100 per cent more than the assets in 1926.

Lehman Corp. Sells Steels, Buys Aircrafts, Motors

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Lehman Corporation, an investing company, made wide readjustment in its portfolio of common stocks during the final three months of 1938, the company's year-end report disclosed today.

One change was the sale of its entire 8,000 common shares of United States Steel Corporation common and its 8,000 Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Largest of additions to present holdings of securities included 10,-000 shares of General Motors common, 7,800 General Foods, 3,200 Greyhound Corporation. The company also sold its entire holdings of 13,000 Gimbel Brothers.

Stocks acquired, which did not appear in the portfolio at the end of last September, included 2,000 Electric Auto-Lite Co., 8,100 Bell Aircraft, 6,700 Lockheed Aircraft, 3,700 Glenn L. Martin Co., 1,500 Colts Patent Firearms Manufacturing Co.

Net assets as of December 31 last, at market value, totaled $33.97 per share, against $30.72 three months earlier.

Cotton Lower; January 8.33

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—In nervous trading cotton futures dropped 2 to 16 points today. Near months were under pressure of foreign liquidation and hedge selling from the start. Southern offerings appeared in distant months.

Some selling was attracted, cotton sources said, by fears possible modification of the farm program would permit freer marketings of cotton next season.

Income Gain Of Five Billion Seen for 1939

Also to Exceed 1937 Basic Forces Point To Broad Expansion

New York, Jan. 6.—Business recovery in 1939 gives promise of boosting the national income $5,-000,000,000 above 1938, according to the Brookmire Economic Service today. Such a substantial gain would result in surpassing the 1937 total income of about $70,000,000,000.

More so than at any time since the 1920's, the basic economic forces plus the trend of Government policy are so geared as to produce expansion that should be great in extent, wide in scope and lasting in time. Accordingly, the Annual Brookmire Forecaster reaches the following conclusions:

Business is expected to expand on the broadest front in years. Before the end of 1939, business has a fighting chance of beating the peak reached in the spring of 1937; and before this economic cycle ends, the best level since 1929 should be attained.

Defense a Factor

National defense plans will multiply aircraft orders, augment naval construction, increase purchases of machinery and equipment, encourage expansion of utilities, spur rebuilding of the merchant marine and give added reason for rehabilitating rail equipment.

Construction expansion will be double barreled, with (1) residential rising sharply to the best levels since the 1925-28 boom years, (2) the rushing of $1,500,000,000 of public works.

Auto sales will be boosted by 1,000,000 or more cars over the 1938 total of 2,750,000. This, together with the stimulus of national defense and construction to the heavy goods, generally should boom the steel industry, as well as stimulate general business, security markets and commodity prices.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 6.—Early steadiness in the stock market was lost later today and final prices were lower for most groups. Gilt-edge issues were under pressure. Foreign bonds, oils and industrials were quiet. Transatlantics recovered partly from opening lows.

Paris.—The bourse weakened in light trading today. Bank of France dropped 270 francs for the day. International issues were in supply. Suez Canal ending 240 francs lower. Losses in rentes ranged up to 2 francs.

Liverpool.—Lower North American cash wheat offers touched off scattered selling in futures today and final prices were off ½ to ⅝ penny. Reports of smaller world shipments steadied the market somewhat in late trading. Cotton futures closed 5 to 7 lower under general liquidation and easier sterling. Selling of Egyptian cotton was fairly heavy. Trade price-fixing gave some scale-down support.

Dairy Herd Report Filed For Fairfax

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. C. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The December report of the Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 1, based on tests of 21 herds of 732 cows, showed an average of 721 pounds of milk and 29.1 pounds of butterfat, it was announced yesterday.

Ten of the cows were sold for beef and six for dairy purposes and 119 were dry. Four registered cows were added to herds.

There were 13 herd averages above and 8 below the association average in milk production and in butterfat production there were 13 herd averages above and 8 below the average. There were 131 cows producing over 40 pounds of butterfat.

The high herd in butterfat production was that of S. P. Spalding, a grade Holstein and Guernsey herd, with 40 pounds; while the high herd in milk production was that of Marvin Perkins, a grade Holstein herd, with 1,092 pounds.

The high cow in fat production was in the Grade Holstein herd of G. M. James with 85.7 pounds. The high cow in milk production was "Mary," in the registered herd of S. P. Spalding, with 2,186 pounds. H. R. Hawkins was tester.

Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 2 reports there were 21 herds on test for the month of December with 624 cows, 81 of them being dry. Sixteen cows were sold for beef.

The association averages were 639 pounds of milk and 26.8 pounds of butterfat. There were 11 herd averages above and 10 below the association average in milk production and in butterfat production there were 10 herd averages above and 11 below the association average. There were 103 cows producing over 40 pounds of butterfat.

The three high herds in butterfat production were owned by H. F. Salisbury, registered Guernsey 656 pounds milk, 34 pounds butterfat; Mrs. Ethel M. Ulfelder, mixed herd 760 pounds milk, 33.3 pounds butterfat; Mrs. John Oliver, Grade Holstein 893 pounds milk, 32.2 pounds butterfat.

The five high cows in butterfat production were owned by Mrs. John Oliver, Grade Holstein, 1,856 pounds milk, 79.8 pounds butterfat; Granville Berry, Grade Holstein, 1,333 pounds milk, 67.9 pounds butterfat; T. B. Mason, Grade Holstein, 1,674 pounds milk, 66.9 pounds butterfat; Mrs. Ethel M. Ulfelder, Grade Guernsey, 1,199 pounds milk, 62.3 pounds butterfat; O. K. Miller, Grade Holstein, 1,677 pounds milk, 62 pounds butterfat. W. G. Merritt was tester.

Sermon Topic Announced

The Rev. Carl Maxwell, pastor of the churches of the Fairfax Methodist Circuit, will give a sermon on "The Fellowship of Evangelism" tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. at Pender, and 11 a. m. at Fairfax. James E. Bauserman, of Fairfax, will conduct the services of the young people's classes and the adult class at Centreville Church School at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The Epworth League will meet at Andrew Chapel at 7 p. m. and at Fairfax at 7:30 p. m. Both meetings will discuss "What Christ Means to Our Community."

A training school for the churches of the Fairfax Methodist Circuit, the East Fairfax Circuit, the Chesterbrook-Langley Charge and the Falls Church Charge will be held at Falls Church Methodist Church beginning at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. H. H. Sherman will teach "The Spirit and Genius of Methodism." Dr. Robin Gould will teach the course, "Survey of the Old Testament"; the Rev. J. A. Schwartz will teach "Understanding People." Rev. R. M. Sharpe will teach "Missions in the Young People's Division." and the Rev. R. Carl Maxwell will teach the course, "Evangelism and Church Relationships." The sessions will close Friday.

Tomorrow morning the Sacrament of Holy Communion will be administered in the Oakton Methodist Church at the 10:30 service.

In the united service of the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches at Vienna, the Rev. L. C. Wainwright will preside at the Sacrament of Holy Communion and will receive new members into the Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Lowell M. Atkinson will preach a brief sermon on the theme "In the Valley of Decision."

The Rev. W. L. Ribble will resume monthly evening services at The Falls Episcopal Church starting tomorrow evening when the Northern Virginia Choral Society will present the cantata, "The Carol From the Skies."

The Night Guild of the church has pledged $100 toward a building fund for a new parish hall, an additional $100 was promised the vestry to help with redecoration of the interior of the church and $100 for improving Sunday school conditions in the parish hall. Guild members opposed spending any money in renovating or changing the hall, which they hold entirely inadequate to serve the needs of the Sunday school.

The members of Herndon Congregational Church have arranged the following program for tomorrow: Services at 11 a. m., sermon by the Rev. W. I. Winter, of Arlington, Va. Luncheon will be served at noon, and at 1 p. m. the annual business meeting and election of church officers will be held. At 2 p. m. there will be a social hour.

State's Press Secretary

ROBERT C. HARPER

Richmond newspaperman and secretary of the Citizens Road League of Virginia, will take office February 1 as press secretary of the Commonwealth. Gov. Price appointed Mr. Harper to succeed Carter W. (Bishop) Wormeley, State publicity director, who died last summer.

Today Will Mark Daguerre's Work In Photography

Sadur's Counsel Seeks to Withdraw In Warring Case

Former District Attorney Rover asked Justice Laws yesterday to authorize him to withdraw as counsel for Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax expert whose second trial for conspiring with the Warring brothers, numbers operators, is set for January 23. The jury disagreed in the first trial.

Justice Laws asked Sadur whether he consented and Sadur said he wished to keep Rover as his counsel but had not been "able to make the financial arrangements." Justice Laws said he hoped it would not be necessary to bring another lawyer into the involved case. He said he would defer an order on Rover's request until next Thursday.

At the close of the trial, Rover pleaded for a continuance, pointing out that he had been forced to neglect a number of important cases by the extensive preparation for the Warring case. He could attend to nothing else, he pointed out, in the three weeks the case took in court.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court. In the matter of the estate of Harry Overton Waters, deceased. Administration No. 52623. Order of publication. Letters of administration upon all the moneys, goods, chattels, rights and credits of Harry Overton Waters, late of the District of Columbia, deceased, having been granted unto Robert Lee O'Brien on the 27th day of January, 1938, and no distribution having been made to the next of kin of said deceased except for two partial distributions in the total sum of Fifteen Hundred Dollars ($1,500) made to David S. Waters pursuant to authorization of this court, and it having been made known to the court by the petition of the said Robert Lee O'Brien, administrator as aforesaid, filed herein on the 21st day of November, 1938, for instructions and for the appointment of a special master to ascertain and determine who are the next of kin of the said Harry Overton Waters surviving at the time of his death, that it is impossible for the said administrator definitely to determine who are all of the persons entitled to participate in said estate and that it is likewise impossible to compute the exact amount distributable to each of said next of kin until each and every such next of kin is definitely ascertained; and it having been ordered by this Honorable Court, by its order entered herein on the 21st day of November, 1938, that the said petition and the proceedings thereafter to be taken thereon shall be deemed a plenary proceeding within the meaning of Title 18, Section 129 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia, and there having been issued pursuant to said order the usual process of this court commanding the parties in interest in said estate, as hereinafter set forth, to appear in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, and answer the exigencies of said petition aforesaid, which said process, so issued, was returned "Not to be found" as to the persons hereinafter named; and it having been shown by the affidavit of counsel for said administrator heretofore filed herein, that all of said persons in interest are non-residents of the District of Columbia, it is this 5th day of January, 1939, ordered that Emma Eaton, Buffalo, New York; Clayton W. Tweedy, also known as Clayton M. Tweedy, address unknown; the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Clayton W. Tweedy, also known as Clayton M. Tweedy, if deceased; Edmund T. Tweedy, address unknown; the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Edmund T. Tweedy, if deceased, and the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of Harry Overton Waters, deceased (the foregoing being the persons named in said petition), and all other persons having or claiming to have any right, title, interest or claim in said estate be, and they are hereby commanded to appear in this court on the 24TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1939, to answer under oath the said petition and to show cause, if any they have, why they severally have or have not any interest in said estate, or why they severally claim any right to distributive shares in said estate, as well, also why the prayers of said petition should not be granted and a special master appointed as therein prayed, provided, however, and it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, a newspaper of general circulation published in the District of Columbia, once a week for three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first of said publications to be not less than forty (40) days before said return day. Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

From W. Howard Woolworth, Buffalo's bridge expert, comes the report of a hand safely bid to four spades by Oswald Jacoby and Charles Lockridge, though Jacoby had started with an exceedingly light opening bid. The incident took place at the recent Cleveland tournament.

Jacoby, west, and not vulnerable, opened with a one-diamond bid which even Whitey might not have indorsed; for, although the two quick tricks were present, the four probable winners existed largely in Jacoby's opinion of his partner's play. Jacoby's hand:

♠ A 10 8 5
◇ Q J 9
♣ J 10 5

The bidding, with North-South vulnerable, went like this:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

The complete deal:

	♠ 7 6 ♡ 10 5 ◇ 10 6 5 ♣ K 7 6 4 3 2
♠ A 10 8 5 ♡ A J 7 ◇ Q J 9 ♣ J 10 5	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K Q 4 3 2 ♡ 9 4 3 2 ◇ 7 4 ♣ A Q
	♠ J 9 ♡ K Q 8 6 ◇ A K 8 3 2 ♣ 9 8

Lockridge exhibited fine technique in his handling of the play. South opened the nine of clubs, the ten was put on from dummy, North properly ducked, and the queen in the closed hand won. Lockridge laid down one round of trumps and exited from his hand with a small diamond. South took the king and continued with the club eight, which declarer won with the ace.

East took a second round of trumps with dummy's ace, preserving the entries to his own hand, which exhausted the adversaries, and then led the diamond jack, throwing South again in the lead.

South took the diamond with the ace and played a diamond back to dummy's queen as Lockridge sluffed a heart. He entered his hand by trumping the club jack and played a heart to the ace-jack. South split his honors and Lockridge then had to yield but one heart trick. He made four spades, losing two diamonds and a heart.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

AROUND April 1, 1939, approximately 150,000 census takers will roam the city streets and the rural wallows to embalm in census books the name of every sovereign citizen and the citizen's children and his cousins and his uncles and his aunts.

And this historic and important undertaking is causing some behind-the-back-door speculation over how the census and the national election fall within the same year and how a new Secretary of Commerce was recently appointed to preside over Commerce and the census, too; and how the census will have to be taken mighty discreetly less some suspicious tongues insinuate that the enumerators carry not only their books and fountain pens within the houses, but also a message subtle but clear.

The thought was expressed to The Diary from Capitol Hill, which is alert in this season for subtle messages, and is so left where it started, but launching the census will be a terrific undertaking, as ever. Here in Washington they will need between 7,000 and 8,000 functionaries of all degrees, and these will swell the national total to around 150,000.

At the moment, practically nothing can be done because the Census Bureau has little funds. Appropriation will come, it is expected, on July 1. The outlook is that Washington enumerators must pass some kind of flimsy civil service test. But the process of appointing those in the field may yet have to be determined.

The bulk of appointments won't come until 1940 and their tenure of service is fleeting. The administrative workers tenure will rise and fall with the progress of the work.

CHANGE comes to the Practice and Procedure Division, Bureau of Internal Revenue, as follows: The present Research Section is designated Co-ordinating and Advisory Section . . . the Special Subjects Group and the Bulletin and Rulings Distribution Group of the Bureau Information and Rulings Section are abolished . . . The duties and personnel of the Special Subjects Group of the Bureau Information and Rulings Section are transferred to the Co-ordinating and Advisory Section . . . C. C. Appel, chief, Research Section, is designated chief, Co-ordinating and Advisory Section . . . C. C. Haig, chief, Special Subjects Group, Bureau Information and Rulings Section, is designated assistant chief, Co-ordinating and Advisory Section . . . Charles R. Wanner, chief, Bulletin and Rulings Distribution Group, Bureau Information and Rulings Section, is designated assistant chief, Bureau Information and Rulings Section. Personnel, to all intents and purposes, are not hazarded.

THE general feeling among Congressmen over the President's reorganiation utterance: He simply left it to someone else to do this time.

The general feeling after Secretary Hopkins' first press conference: The big job impresses him, and as yet he has only gone sightseeing in the building.

EMERGENCY employes, particularly in the GAO, who have read the budget with alarm at not seeing any funds for them in 1940, needn't bother because these will come when the emergency relief appropriation is offered. There was a similar state of affairs last year.

WHOEVER succeeds Frank T. Bell as Commissioner of Fisheries must be part scientist and part administrator, and he will find the bureau laying emphasis on matters at variance with its original and historic practices. Originally, the bureau went into the water, feet first, to develop the scientific aspects of fish propagation. But within the last few years it has become economically minded, giving a vast attention to how fishermen can market their fish. Both the old and newer phases of endeavor are taken as equally important. The new commissioner, then, figuratively, must have a test tube in one hand and a book on economics in the other.

The gentleman who preceded Commissioner Bell, Henry O'Malley, got the job because he deserved it. He entered at the very bottom of the bureau, and after 35 years of intense application became commissioner. How much application to science and economics the new commissioner will have made will be interesting to learn of, once he is appointed.

Bob Burns Says—

You know, the other day I heard a big director bawlin' out one of the extras. It seems that the poor guy sneezed right at the climax of a very sad moment in the scene. "What the blankety-blank-blank was the matter with you?" snaps the director. "Couldn't you hold that sneeze till I yelled 'cut?'" "I tried to, sir," says the extra. "I held my breath till I was blue in the face." "Well, that didn't do you no good," says the director. "We're not shootin' technicolor. Now we're gonna make a retake. An' if you sneeze this time you're through!"

You can imagine how the poor extra feels. He blows his nose an' clears his throat an' tries to get a scared expression off his face. The scene commences all over again . . . and she works up to the climax, when, all of a sudden there's a loud "Kerchoo!" The assistant director comes rushin' on the set. "Who done that?" he demands. The poor extra looks like he's gonna faint. "Never mind! Blankety-blank-blank-blank!" swears the director. "That was me!"

Grin and Bear It

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Lightfoot the Deer has the reputation of being selfish, with small consideration for others than himself. He is reputed to be arrogant, vain, demanding admiration, and with small regard for the well-being of Mrs. Lightfoot, looking out for himself and leaving her to look out for herself and the children. But this is not wholly true and not quite fair to Lightfoot. It may be true that in the fall when his head is crowned with the many-pointed weapons that we call antlers, when he has his full strength and in his pride feels that he has no equal in the Green Forest, he thinks only of himself. It may be true then, but there are other times when he is a good and loyal mate.

Now that he had lost his antlers, and so no longer wore a crown, he was rather humble. Those antlers had fallen but a few days before. His days and nights of blowing and challenging others to fight were over until another fall, and he no longer lorded it over Mrs. Lightfoot. In his new-found humility he was glad to be allowed in her company. So it was that when in leaping a fence she became caught in the wire, he stood by. He was unable to do anything to help free her, but he did give her the comfort of his company and he drove off Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy and others who sought to annoy her, or worse.

When at last Mrs. Lightfoot was set free he was waiting for her not far away, and together they sought the quiet depths of the Green Forest. It was well that Lightfoot was loyal. That night Yowler the Bobcat struck the trail. He knew at once that something was wrong with Mrs. Lightfoot. They had passed but a few minutes before he struck their trail. He turned and followed it eagerly, hungrily, stealthily. His mouth watered until it drooled at the thought of a dinner of fresh venison. He had a wholesome respect for the sharp-edged hoofs of Mrs. Lightfoot and the manner in which she could use them.

He knew that Lightfoot was with her, for there was Lightfoot's trail with hers, but he also knew that Lightfoot had lost his antlers. Such things are quickly known throughout the Green Forest. He suspected that without them Lightfoot would be more likely to run than to fight. He hoped so, anyway.

Yowler was doomed to disappointment. When he caught up with them, Mrs. Lightfoot was lying down and Lightfoot was on guard. He detected Yowler despite the latter's stealthy approach and, by his sudden rush, took Yowler quite off guard. Indeed, Yowler, spitting and snarling, barely twisted from under those sharp hoofs as Lightfoot reared and struck down with them. Had they landed, they would have cut his coat and might have hurt him badly.

Lightfoot whirled and plunged again. Yowler had no time to even try to attack Mrs. Lightfoot. He had all he could do to save his own skin, for the big buck was thoroughly enraged and those sharp hoofs were all the weapons he needed. Spitting, snarling and growling, Yowler retreated. He had lost his appetite for venison.

Now, while this had been going on Old Man Coyote had stolen near. He, too, had found out that something was wrong with Mrs. Lightfoot. He, too, had visions of a venison dinner. But when he saw the fierce plunges of Lightfoot and heard his angry snorts as he drove off Yowler the Bobcat, that venison dinner no longer looked to be worth the price he might have to pay. He grinned ruefully and slipped away as silently as he had approached.

"Somer other time when she hasn't company," muttered Old Man Coyote.

So Lightfoot the Deer loyally guarded his pretty mate until in a few days the stiffness was gone from that injured leg and she could run as well as ever.

Montgomery To Have First Aid Training

Red Cross Courses To Provide Teachers Begin This Month

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

First aid training courses will be conducted this month by the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross. The primary objective is to train a small group of county citizens to become first aid instructors for classes throughout the county.

There will be no charge other than the cost of the textbook. Tentative plans are for a two-week course, with instruction to be given from 7 to 10 p. m. from Monday through Friday of each week.

Instruction will be given by first aid graduates from the national Red Cross headquarters and the certificate will entitle graduates to instruct any course in standard and advanced first aid in the county. The new instructors must conduct at least one class in a period of three years in order to retain instructors' cards without a re-examination.

Registrations are being accepted by Mrs. Margaret Fleharty, executive secretary of the county chapter, in Rockville.

Young Democrats to Nominate

Rockville—Nominations of officers will feature the monthly meeting of the United Young Men's Democratic Club of Montgomery County at the old courthouse here at 8 p. m. Monday. The club also will consider proposed legislative recommendations to be submitted to the Maryland General Assembly and will plan for participation in the celebration of the inauguration of Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor next Wednesday.

Dr. Crowley to Speak

Kensington—Dr. Ralph M. Crowley will address a meeting of the Woman's Community Club at 12:30 p. m. Monday at Masonic Hall. A luncheon will precede the business meeting. Mrs. Harry Harcum, of the Maryland Federation of Woman's Clubs also will attend. Arrangements are in charge of a committee headed by Mrs. R. W. Buzzard.

To Discuss Library Plans

Bethesda.—Further steps toward organizing a public library in the western suburban section of the county will be discussed at a meeting of the new Library Association Wednesday night in the County Building here. A draft of organization plans will be submitted by the steering committee appointed last month.

Upper Montgomery Democrats

Gaithersburg.—The Upper Montgomery County Young Men's Democratic Club will meet at the fire house here at 8 p. m. Tuesday to nominate officers and make plans for 1939.

Masons to Confer Degrees

Takoma.—Master Mason degrees will be conferred by Takoma Lodge, No. 29, F. A. A. M. at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday in the Masonic Hall, according to Worshipful Master James F. Blose.

Senior Warden David C. Penicks will be in the East, Junior Deacon George E. Davis will act as senior deacon, and Junior Warden Milton Bollman will deliver the lecture.

Waite Will Probated

Rockville.—The will of Mrs. Eliza Eugenia Waite, of Silver Spring, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans Court, bequeaths $5,000 each to her sons, Harrison Waite, jr., and Thomas Young Waite, and leaves the residue to her husband, Harrison Waite, who is named executor. The will, executed February 28, 1926, does not state the value of the estate.

Mrs. Matthews Asks Divorce

Rockville — Through Attorney Kenneth Lyddane, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Matthews, of Takoma Park, Md., has filed suit in the Circuit Court here for an absolute divorce from Lorenzo Matthews, charging technical desertion. They were married in Rockville March 5, 1932, and have no children, the petition states.

4-H Club Girls Winners

Rockville—Montgomery County 4-H Club girl winners in the Statewide style revue at College Park last August were announced yesterday by Miss Dorothy Emerson, State girl club leader. They include Helen Bryan, Pauline Gish, Marjorie Gould and Edwina, Jean and Nancy Hembleton, all of the Somerset club; Gladys Fetzer, Damascus; Jacke Gaither and Catherine Stiles, Shady Grove; Alice Leighton, Rockville, and Anne Lee Tipton, Dickerson.

Phebus Funeral Today

Gaithersburg—Funeral services for Joseph C. Phebus, 81, who resided here for 60 years, will be at 2 p. m. today at the home of his son, Monroe Phebus. Burial will be in Forest Oak Cemetery.

Mr. Phebus, who died Thursday at his home, leaves another son, Ernest Phebus, of Baltimore, and two daughters, Mrs. William G. Davis and Mrs. Howard Martineau, both of this town. A brother, Maurice Phebus, also lives here.

Union Services Tomorrow

Rockville—After a recess of several weeks, the weekly union services of the Baptist, Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian churches here will be resumed in the Baptist Church tomorrow night. The sermon will be by the Rev. Herbert Cooper, of the Baptist Church.

"Book Chat" Monday

Takoma Park—Mrs. O. W. Johnson, president of the Petworth Women's Club and members of the literature department of that organization, will be guests of the local Library Association at its "book chat" at 8 p. m. Monday in the library, 8 Sherman avenue.

Pryor Rites Today

Takoma Park—Funeral services for George M. Pryor, 67, who died Thursday at his home, 36 Poplar avenue, will be held at 3 p. m. today at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Pryor was superintendent of the local office of the Peoples Life Insurance Co. and formerly was president of the old Puritan Life Insurance Co. in Washington, which he organized.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Pryor; two daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Bicknell and Miss Virginia Pryor, and a son, George W. Pryor.

Moncure; treasurer, Frederick B. Rawlings; sergeant at arms, Gene Bode; parliamentarian, Franklin P. Backus, Clyde B. Lanham and Paul L. DeLaney.

A committeeman and committeewoman will be nominated and elected at the next meeting.

Clyde C. Lamond, president, named the following to prepare a ballot and conduct the election: Charles L. Burgess, Michael P. Frasca and Thornton Goods.

Mrs. Charles Leef, Mrs. Irene Pancoast, Fred Petitt, and Paul C. Snyder were appointed an auditing committee to report at the annual meeting.

Mrs. Kersey Dies

Mrs. Jennie Kersey, 77, widow of Capt. Mathew Kersey, of Alexandria, died Thursday at the nursing home at Dunn Loring, where she had made her home for a number of years. She is survived by a granddaughter, Mrs. Clarence Desper, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Annie Phillips, of Alexandria.

The funeral will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Cunningham funeral home, 809 Cameron street, conducted by the Rev. O. W. Brittingham, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, Alexandria, and burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Bootleg Milk Survey Group Dissolved

Abolition Ordered After Failure to Reach Code Agreement

A committee appointed last year to investigate the extent of traffic of "bootleg" cream and milk and recommend a new milk code was abolished yesterday by the Board of Commissioners.

The committee, comprising 17 members, was appointed last February following a public hearing on the question and a failure of officials to agree on a set of amendments to the milk code.

Recently, members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association appeared before the Commissioners requesting what progress, if any, had been made by the committee.

Last week Health Officer George C. Ruhland reported the members of the committee could not agree and that he would submit a draft of his own proposals next week.

It was brought out at the hearing some of the out-of-town "ice-cream mix" sold to local consumers was turning up on restaurant tables for use as cream for coffee. Local and nearby milk producers protested because the standard set up for milk and cream here probably are the highest in the country.

Dr. Ruhland was chairman of the committee, which included Representatives Howard Smith, of Virginia, and Merlin Hull, of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Reigleman Dies in Her Car At Office Doors

Mrs. Hettie E. Reigelman, 48, of Cottage City, Md., an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, was found dead at the steering wheel of her automobile, near the bureau, shortly before working hours yesterday. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said her death was caused by a heart ailment.

Mrs. Reigelman had lived in or near Washington since she was a child. She was appointed to the bureau in 1925 as a printer's assistant. Her husband, Alfred A. Reigelman, died several years ago.

The funeral will be Monday at 2 p. m. from Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Will U. S. Have to Fight Germany Again?

A by-product of the Munich pact was the sympathy of U. S. voters towards America's World War allies. If you had read the Gallup Poll in The Post on Sunday, October 23, you would know whether the average U. S. citizen thinks we will have to fight Germany again.

You cannot keep informed on shifting trends of American opinion if you do not read the Gallup Polls which appear in The Post every Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. Be sure to read the two Gallup Polls which appear regularly in The Sunday Post. You miss half the polls if you don't get The Sunday Post.

Greenbelters Ask Return Of Auto Taxes

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 42 University rd., Calvert Hills, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3888.

Requests from Greenbelt residents for the return of automobile taxes have been received by the Prince Georges County treasurer's office, it was learned yesterday following a ruling by Ogle Marbury, attorney for the county commissioners, that they had no taxing power over the Federally-owned community.

The commissioners, it was understood, would be asked what to do about the requests at their meeting Tuesday.

The taxation question arose at the commissioners' meeting Tuesday when Marbury was asked for his opinion on whether Greenbelt residents could be assessed by the county for their automobiles and household goods.

The treasurer's office, however, had previously sent out bills to a number of Greenbelt car owners, and some returns have been made.

The Government community was chartered as an incorporated town by the State Legislature two years ago, but the question of whether it is an integral part of the county or a "Federal oasis" never has been definitely decided.

Marbury told the commissioners that, in his opinion, it was "a Government reservation," outside the county's jurisdiction.

Contracts Awarded

Upper Marlboro—Nicholas Orem, Prince Georges County school superintendent, announced yesterday contracts for construction of additions to the District Heights School had been awarded to the Joseph Light Construction Co., of Washington, subject to approval of the PWA. The Washington company submitted low bid of $32,238 for the additions, including two classrooms, principal's office and auditorium.

Building to Be Razed

Upper Marlboro—The two-story building which houses the county police substation, health department and law offices of Leroy Pumphrey will be vacated today as work will start Monday on demolishing the structure to make room for enlargement of the courthouse.

After renting the building for a number of years, the county recently purchased the site for the additions. Last Tuesday the building was sold for $45.

Until the courthouse additions are completed in about nine months, the health department will be located in the offices of Miss Agnes Duvall, county social worker, and the police department in the police courtroom.

Firemen Elect

Election Set Today

Upper Marlboro. — The Prince Georges County Farm Bureau will elect officers and delegates to the State convention in Baltimore, January 10 to 13, at a meeting in the courthouse at 1:30 p. m. today. The proposed tobacco auction markets to be located here and at Hughesvillle in Charles County will be discussed.

Meeting Called

Upper Marlboro.—P. E. Clark, Prince Georges County agricultural agent, announced yesterday a meeting to discuss extension of electrical lines in Prince Georges and Charles counties will be held Monday, at 7 p. m., in La Plata High School, under auspices of the Rural Electrification Administration.
